Plans for July Fourth Cele-

Something in the nature of definite plans for the reception to Lowell's war heroes on the Fourth of July were mapped out last evening at a meeting of the committee appointed by Mayor Perry D. Thompson to have charge of the celebration. Outlined briefly, the program of the day will include a big cabaret and smoker for all service men at the state armory at least $500.

FISHING LICENSE BILL

Fifty Cents for Fishing License and $1 for Combination

(Special to The Sun)

STATE HOUSE, Boston, July 2.—Devotees of the art of Isaac Walton will hereafter be compelled to obtain a license if they desire to fish in any stream or pond which has been stocked since 1910, under the terms of a bill which was ordered to a third reading in the house yesterday afternoon, by a vote of 70 to 40.

The bill has already passed the senate, and today's action of the house
appears to make certain its passage.
It is to take effect ninety days after its passage.

Under the terms of the measure, any resident of Massachusetts may obtain a fishing license upon payment of a fee of fifty cents. A combination fishing and hunting license may be had for one dollar. Non-residents are to be required to pay a fee of $10 for either license. No alien may obtain a license unless he is the owner of property which is taxed on a valuation of at least $500.

It is estimated that the new license will yield the commonwealth a revenue of at least $70,000. Representatives of the fish and game department find that there are approximately 140,- 000 persons in Massachusetts who consider themselves fishermen, and while sixteen cents of each license fee goes to the city or town clerk issuing the license, it is believed that receipts from the combination and non-resident licenses will make the fees received by the commonwealth average at least

NEW HIGH SCHOOL BILL

School Plans Must Be Submitted to City Council—
Copy of Bill

If the Massachusetts legislature sees fit to pass the act recommended by the committee on municipal finance this week to authorize the city of Lowell to incur indebtedness to the extent of $750,000 beyond the debt limit for the constructing and furnishing of a high school building, the money specified will not be at the disposal of the high school building commission until the latter body submits plans to the municipal council together with the estimated cost of the work.

Furthermore, if the estimate as submitted is in excess of the amount specified in the act, together with the $127,000 already to the credit of the commission, the council has the power to refuse to authorize any part of the loan to be used by the commission.

Thus, the act is so worded that it puts the financial end of the high school proposition almost wholly in the hands of the city council and the building commission must await the word from the council before it can go ahead.

Major Scott, the commander, in his all was well.

The R-34 was in 55 degrees, 20 minutes off the coast of Ireland) at 8 o'clock this morning (Greenwich mean time), according to a wireless despatch from

She was then making an average speed of 45 knots an hour.

The position of the R-34 at 12 o'clock

MRS. GILLIGAN GIVEN LIFE SENTENCE

MIDDLETON, Conn., July 2.—With the consent of Judge John E. Keeler, counsel for Mrs. Amy E. Archer-Gilligan late yesterday entered a plea of second degree murder for causing the death of Franklin R. Andrews of Cheshire, May 30, 1914, at the Gilligan Home for the Aged in Windsor.

Life imprisonment in the state prison at Wethersfield was imposed at once. She had been on trial in the superior court here for the last 10 days.

COURT GALLows

Change of plea came after a consultation between Benedict M. Holden, chief counsel for Mrs. Gilligan and State's Attorney Hugh Alecorn. The prosecutor explained to the court that some doubt might exist as to whether Mrs. Gilligan was a free moral agent because of her use of drugs and the court agreed that such doubt might be entertained sufficiently by the jury to cause a second degree verdict.

Preceding the ending of taking of testimony State Policeman Hurley was on the stand giving rebuttal evidence for the state.

This was the second trial of Mrs. Gilligan. The first was in Hartford, in 1916, at which time she was found guilty in the first degree, sentenced to be hanged, and was reprieved by Governor Holcomb that she might appeal. On the appeal to the supreme court of errors she was granted a new trial. Change of venue was obtained and her second trial started in this city on June 12, many days being consumed in empanelling jury and ten days of testimony followed.

After receiving her sentence Mrs. Gilligan was allowed time to part with her daughter, Mary Archer, who has been in court all during the trial. She will be taken to the state prison today.

BISHOP DELANY GENERAL ASSEMBLY, K. OF C. DISCUSSES SOCIAL EXPANSION

The summer meeting of Bishop Delany General Assembly, K. of C., held Monday evening, was signalled not only by an unusually large attendance but the discussion embraced many subjects having to do with the social expansion of the organization. Faithful Navigator Thomas B. Delany presided and several important communications were read. One had to do with a joint outing with Fr. Gabriel Druelle Assembly of Salem at the Williams and another with participation in the Embarkation day observance of Bishop Cheverus Assembly in August. The proposition from Salem was discussed and referred pending something more definite.

Faithful Navigator Delany reported as a delegate to the state convention of the assemblies in May and gave a resume of the meeting. His report was supplemented by remarks by Faithful Purser William H. Gallagher, the other delegate. The latter favored a monthly bulletin as discussed at the convention as a progressive idea.

The financial officers of the assembly, the comptroller and the purser, announced that they would go over the financial affairs of the assembly this week with a view to clearing up outstanding bills before the opening of the fiscal year in October. Their report, tentatively drawn and showing a healthy financial condition, was presented to the assembly. The outlook for a busy fall and winter is most promising. Under the head of the good of the order, interesting remarks were made by Grand Knight Robert R. Thomas, Deputy Grand Knight George F. Brigman, Sir Knights Albert F. O'Hear, John E. Hart, Daniel S. O'Brien, John J. O'Connor, John T. Buckley, John T. Burns and Hugh C. McOsker. It was announced that there would be no meeting in August in compliance with a time-honored custom.

LOWELL GETS TWO EXTRA ELABORATE PLANS FOR IN SCHEDULE SHIFT

Of 45 new summer trains the Boston & Maine railroad has recently added to its system, Lowell gets only two, one north bound train and one south bound train.

The new summer north bound train leaves Boston at 9:46 a. m. and arriving in Lowell at 10:25, leaves at 10:26. The new summer south bound train is an afternoon train. It arrives in Lowell from White River Junction via Concord, Manchester and Nashua, at 3:55 and leaves for Boston at 4 o'clock.

Station Agent Brown of the Boston & Maine today stated that it was improbable that the road would run any extra trains on the Fourth. In case the traffic is found to be unexpectedly heavy it is an easy matter, he says, to run regular trains in sections.

NASHUA, N. H., July 2.—An automobile, driven by John F. Burke and carrying George F. Furbeth, both of Wilton, coming up from Lowell yesterday morning at 3 o'clock, crashed through the gates at the Main street crossing which were down for a train from Worcester.

The car was smashed. The men started to run, but were halted after a couple of shots from Patrolman Lawrence's pistol. Burke was fined $100 on a charge of operating while intoxicated, and Furbeth, who had nine quarts of whiskey, was fined $25.

M. J. Quigley of Wilton for whom Burke formerly worked and to whose garage Burke had a key, was in court. He denied that Burke took the car without his knowledge or consent.

TURKS ORGANIZE THREE ARMIES

Situation Now Giving the Peace Conference Much Uneasiness

Officers of New Armies Refuse to Obey Orders From Constantinople

PARIS, Tuesday, July 1.—(By the Associated Press)—The Turkish situation is giving the peace conference much uneasiness. Reports received here indicate that there have been organized in Asiatic-Turkey three Turkish armies whose generals refuse to obey orders from Constantinople. These armies are concentrated at Amasia, Balikesir and Konia. The Turks at Konia are threatening the Italians, while those at Balikesir are opposing the Greeks.

As the position of Constantinople has been much weakened by the refusal of the conference to consider proposals from the Turkish delegates immediately, it is feared that independent movements will develop throughout Asia Minor.

EFFECT OF PROHIBITION ON ICE BUSINESS

What about the ice it used to take to cool Lowell's malt and spirituous drinks?

No ice for that purpose is needed now but how much more ice is available for our community's needs now that all of us have been forced to join the United Order of Camels, Herd No. 21144?

One of the ways of estimating how much ice it took to cool the municipal boozes is to go on the assumption that a saloon doing a business of any consequence at all would consume ten baskets of shaved ice daily giving a total weight of 500 pounds. Many places would have to have much more than this—sometimes twice this amount—and of course some places did not use as much as this. It is rather fair therefore to go on the theory that ten baskets, 500 pounds of ice per day, ought to be allotted as an average amount of ice for the 100 places in this city where liquor was sold. This gives 50,000 pounds or 25 tons. This again is an unsatisfactory result for 25 tons of ice is a small carload and who is prepared to argue that even a 45 ton carload of ice was enough to make the drinks cool during an average summer day?

Now we have got to have some talk about what will become of this unforeseen extra supply of ice we are to have through the shades being drawn in the booze emporiums and likewise some talk about whether icemen are to lose their jobs.

Miss Gage, head of the Gage Ice company, says not so as regards this latter possibility. She has jobs enough for all the husky boys who can juggle the ice cakes out of the wagons and be good to her big ice wagon horses. Yes, and turn in the entire receipts of money received for ice. No one is going to lose his job.

There were no "all saloon routes." An iceman might for instance fill up a parson's ice chest and run along for 12 or 15 other home calls and then would reach an oasis otherwise a saloon. He might be offered a drink and he might not. Booze has been selling high and why give it away when it could be sold?

This is one of the reasons why it cannot be ascertained as to how much ice was needed daily for the liquor dealers. Nearly every route would have at least one saloon on it.

As regards the ice made available through the closing of the saloons, it will be used up before the summer is over in just the normal demands of the homes. The supply of ice the Gage company has on hand is smaller than was probably the case this time last year but Miss Gage believes she has ice enough to see this season through as she has made a strong resolution not to sell any of her ice to outside dealers. There is but a small quantity of Merrimack river ice at the Gage ice house in Lowell because the weather was so unseasonable for ice cutting last winter on the river, consequently nearly all of Lowell's ice supply has to be carried in by railroad from Forge Village and South Chelmsford which, of course, makes it more expensive. Miss Gage had a new large ice house built at South Chelmsford last winter which she was able to have filled with ice.

Although the closing of the saloons means a loss to her business of at least $250 a day, Miss Gage says that it had some drawbacks. The ice had to be shaved in baskets for the basket was the unit of measure and even the best of baskets could not stand wear very long. It took quite a lot of the iceman's time to prepare the ice and he had to attend to the liquor trade customers the first thing in the morning. Many times the liquor men rebuked at paying more for their ice than anyone else in the community.

F FARMS FOR SOLDIERS ON EASY TERMS

Lowell soldiers who have been discharged from the service but who are satisfied with the employment in which they are now engaged will be interested in a proposition of the federal government to provide such men with farms to be paid for over a long term of years. The details of the plan are contained in a booklet, issued by the department of the interior, a large number of copies of which have been received at the local army recruiting station, 117 Merrimack street. These booklets will be given free of charge to any man discharged from the army who is interested in the project.

SNAKE SHOW ADVANCE MEN ARRESTED

A snake charmer appeared in police court today. Yes, a real live honest-to-goodness snake charmer. In this case it was a man, George W. Usher, and he was there because the police had seen fit to arrest him yesterday for breaking and entering a room on Middlesex street and stealing a watch, some beads and 50 cents in money.

George said he halted from Providence, and his pal, Thomas J. Meany, who gives the Hub as his home, was also present at this morning's session.

Thomas was also charged with being implicated in the alleged break, but Thomas is not a snake charmer. He's the "bally-hoo" boy of the show, which is known as Cohen's Snake Charming and Vaudeville show, and which Lowell folks may see at the South common midway on the fast approaching night before the Fourth.

George admitted that he was the right man. Yes, he had stolen the watch, beads and all, but if he hadn't been drunk it would never have happened. Thomas declared that he had no connection with the affair at all, but after hearing the testimony the court found probable cause in both cases, and ordered each held in $290 for the grand jury.

Skeels Murder Case

Never will admit that death was due to arsenic.

Counsel for the defense said he would "rather rely on the first diagnosis of Dr. Charles E. Abbott, the Gay family physician, who certified that Miss Gay died of cerebral hemorrhage. We do not admit the amount of arsenic reported to have been found in the body," he continued, adding:

May Have Wrong Defendant

"If Dr. Abbott saw the symptoms which he now says were of arsenical poisoning, and did not administer an antidote, we have the wrong defendant in the chair. If Dr. George H. Smith saw the same symptoms in the New Jersey case (the death of Albert J. Wilkins, brother of the defendant, who is also charged with his murder), consider again who should be the defendant."

As a motive, counsel said, "they bring in a bunch of junk (articles which Mrs. Skeels was charged with stealing from the Gay home) and want you to take a woman's life because Edith M. Luce (relative of the Gay's) said they were of historic value."

Defendant Lacked Motive

The defendant, her counsel argued, was in her right mind.

"The government lacked a motive so they sent up alienists to find one," he said.

Counsel said that there would be no request for a verdict of manslaughter.

The defendant was guilty of murder in the first degree or she was innocent.

Attorney Daley referred to the government's group of alienists as "that splendid trinity" and said they had never "until a few days ago realized that the death of Miss Gay might have been due to salvoan." Then he continued, "Dr. W. F. Boos rushes to the front to say he was the first man in this country to administer it. He was ready to qualify on any subject."

Aerobatic Expert

Counsel subsequently called Dr. Boos, the "aerobic expert," in referring to the fact that he had qualified as an expert on gas asphyxiation in connection with the incident which the government said was an attempt at suicide by Mrs. Skeels when she was arrested. This episode, counsel argued, was introduced to throw dust in the eyes of the jury, and questions regarding Mrs. Skeels eating talcum powder at the hospital had a similar object. He accused the prosecution of unethical tactics.

Lawyers Clash; Defendant Nobs

After Attorney General Atwill had interrupted the argument to object, Mr. Daley challenged him to explain certain phases of the government's procedure.

Mrs. Lundgreen, propped in her chair with pillows and white of face, sobbed while her counsel read from a letter which she had written to the wife of her brother, Albert. This letter sought to effect a reconciliation between Mr. and Mrs. Wilkins when the husband was seriously ill. Counsel said that Mrs. Skeels was a "loving sister" to the brother she is charged with having poisoned, and ridiculed the theory that she killed him to prevent his appearance in Massachusetts courts as a witness in the case in which she was charged with larceny.

Call State's Tactics "Unfair"

He characterized as "unfair" the act of the prosecution in introducing Mrs. Nellie B. Da Wolfe of New Haven, Conn., first wife of Frank M. Skeels, "recalling a suggestion that 23 years ago the defendant went away with another woman's husband, in an attempt to prove that a woman who would do that would commit murder."

Counsel questioned why Mrs. Skeels would kill the woman who owed her money and whom she loved, said that Miss Gay had never explained to any one the nature of the skin disease from which she suffered, and further queried:

"Did Miss Gay End Life?"

"Did Florence Gay commit suicide or take something by mistake? She said she was sick and tired and discouraged a month before her death, and she refused to call a doctor."

Argues Over Three Hours

"No one would think it suspicious that Mrs. Luce gave Miss Gay a drink," continued Mr. Daley. "Why do they think it suspicious because Mrs. Skeels' brother, mother and father died within two years? There was no suspicion of Mrs. Luce because Mr. and Mrs. Gay and Florence Gay all died within a short time of each other and she was sole heir of the estate amounting to $900."

Mr. Daley spoke three and a half hours.

FISHWAY TO RECEIVE EARLY ATTENTION

In a letter received by him from Chairman Adams, of the state fish and game commission relative to the availability of the money appropriated for the restoration of fishways in the Merrimack River, Simon B. Harris, president of the Lowell Fish and Game association, noticed that no mention was made of the restoration of the fishway at the Pawtucket dam in this city and as the Lowell Fish and Game association was in a great measure responsible for the bringing about of the fishway appropriation, he decided to jog Chairman Adams' memory, which he did in the following letter:

Lowell, Mass., June 27, 1919.

William C. Adams, Chairman,
Commissioners on Fisheries and Game,
22 State House, Boston, Mass.

Dear Sir: Your letter in regard to His Excellency signing the budget which makes available an additional $5000 for the carrying out of construction of the fishway around the dam of the Essex Company in Lawrence, was duly received and contents noted; which sum in addition to the $5000 unexpended last year provides the amount required by your engineers to build this fishway. So far, it seems all right and there can be no further delay justifiably in the carrying of this matter to completion.

You will observe by the act of 1918, Chapter 174, Section 1, that the board of commissioners on fisheries and game acting under the powers now vested in them by law in relation to fishways are hereby directed during the current year to provide, re-establish, or reconstruct existing and suitable fishways on the Merrimack river at Lawrence and Lowell.

As no mention of the fishway to be constructed at Lowell appears in your letter to me, it seems highly proper that we still keep the Pawtucket dam in our minds, and as there appears to be no obstacles in your way in regard to carrying out the proposed construction by the locks and Canals of our city, and as the condition of the river is admirable at the present time for such constructive work, is there anything at the present time to prevent operations there at once?

The Lowell Fish and Game association, as your organization very well knows, has labored earnestly and well in order to bring about the restoration of these two fishways in question; and as we are to have our annual outing in September we desire very much that these fishways shall be restored so that the results may be duly honored on that occasion.

Wishing you every success in the completion of this great public benefit, I remain

Very respectfully yours,

SIMON B. HARRIS,
President,
Lowell Fish and Game Association.

Chairman Adams' Reply

In the following reply to Mr. Harris' letter it will be seen that the fish and game commission intends to give early attention to his suggestions:

Simon B. Harris, Esq.

Pres., Lowell Fish and Game Assn.,

Dear Mr. Harris:

We have your letter of the 27th instant relative to the fishways.

We will go ahead now as rapidly as possible on the Lawrence proposition, and we will give very early attention to your suggestions relative to the fishway at Lowell.

Very truly yours,

WILLIAM ADAMS, Chairman.

BERLIN FACES POLITICAL INSURRECTION

BERLIN, Tuesday, July 1.—(By the Associated Press)—There are now indications that the strike movement in Greater Berlin may develop into a political insurrection.

The street car strike threatens to involve the suburban and belt line railroad workers, if not the big industrial plants. The frankness of Hugo Haas, Herr Hoffman and other radicals now demanding a dictatorship by the proletariat is looked upon as significant. In the meantime Gustav Noske, minister of defense, is increasing his troop patrols in the inner city, and generally tightening martial law regulations.

The most serious phase of the situation is the attempt of the striking railroad workers to halt the movement of freight cars, especially those carrying incoming food and coal.

The expected strike of bank employees did not occur as the organization of bank clerks disavowed the movement. Karl Emonts, a strike leader, was arrested on charge of being a bolshevist propagandist.

You will observe by the act of 1918, Chapter 174, Section 1, that the board of commissioners on fisheries and game acting under the powers now vested in them by law in relation to fishways are hereby directed during the current year to provide, re-establish, or reconstruct existing and suitable fishways on the Merrimack river at Lawrence and Lowell.

REFUTES STATEMENT

Agent Francis J. Mr. O'Hare states that Mr. Ordway's illness is a distinct case of smallpox and that the allegation that he is being confined at the hospital merely to cover up a mistake of the examining physicians is groundless. The case has been thoroughly diagnosed, Mr. O'Hare states, and there is no doubt of it being smallpox, although in a mild form.

"SCRAP OF PAPER"

BOSTON, July 2.—Lamont Rowlands of Picayune, Mississippi, one of the trustees of the Christian Science Publishing society, testifying today, at the masters' hearing suit of the trustees against the board of directors of the First Church of Christ, Scientist, said that the directors had stated, in substance, that the trust deed by which Mrs. Mary Baker Eddy established the publishing society was a "mere scrap of paper." The witness testified also that he had been informed that the directors said they would make the publishing society "an empty shell."

Mr. Rowlands was under cross-examination by counsel for the directors whom the trustees are endeavoring to enjoin from interfering with the affairs of the publishing society.

ADVERTISING RESULTS

A scientific authority has declared that advertising makes an appeal to seven instincts of human nature. They are: (1) property, (2) power, (3) self-preservation, (4) affections, (5) sentiment, (6) reputation, and (7) taste.

We can thus see that the art of advertising as it can be exerted in a daily paper plays to all the human instincts involving profit possibilities.

It is not extreme to say that no business can be so small as not to need or not to afford newspaper advertising. The Sun, for instance, can go over the matter with the small business man and figure out a service for him in advertising whose cost will be in proportion to the volume of business he can do. It goes without saying that no business exists whose manager would assert it was above the need of advertising. Advertising most assuredly gives the greatest results to those who advertise most skillfully and in the best medium, which in Lowell is

THE HIGH SCHOOL

Apparently the legislative committee on municipal finances has sized up the Lowell petition very accurately in deciding that an additional sum of $750,000 should be ample with which to complete the new high school.

The committee evidently sees the reckless extravagance that would sink $2,200,000 in an addition to a high school in a city like Lowell.

Two members of the committee, perhaps guided by practical ideas in regard to building matters, dissented from the recommendation of the committee and suggested that the plans of the new building should be presented to the next general court together with an accurate statement of the cost.

We are not in favor of delaying the project, but the gentleman who asks for the plans and an accurate estimate of the cost, shows sound judgment. To supply this information should be the first duty of the commission in appealing to the legislature for authority to borrow outside the debt limit.

The estimate of $1,500,000 is at least twice as great as it should be. If the legislature grants $750,000, that sum with $400,000 already available should be ample to complete a very respectable building.

The site is paid for, most of the necessary steel is paid for and the plans are paid for, or at least certain plans which the commission seems ready to adopt are now the property of the city. If it appears that these plans call for an extravagant outlay they should be modified.

The plans should provide for a building the cost of which would come within what is reasonable for the kind of building that will meet the requirements of our city, not one that will be needlessly expensive.

If the plans are what the situation demands, then the estimated cost is altogether excessive and extravagant and should be radically reduced. The figures quoted seem to indicate that no school building can be constructed in Lowell at a fair or reasonable price. It is strange that other cities can build school houses at a much less cost than can Lowell.

It is time the high school commission got down to a business basis and arrange to give the city a building as good and as inexpensive as any found in other cities. Contractors and architects are ready to do the work at very much less than the estimate given out by the commission if they get the chance and it should not be necessary to go outside of Lowell to find them either.

The bill now before the legislature if passed in its present form will give the municipal council the power to withhold appropriations sought by the commission in case the estimated cost is considered excessive under the following provision:

"The municipal council may, before authorizing said loan, require the building commission to submit plans with the estimated cost of constructing, equipping and furnishing said high school, and in case the said estimate is in excess of the sum herein authorized to be borrowed and previously appropriated, may refuse to authorize the whole or any part of the loan authorized by this act."

This will make the council a co-partner with the commission in responsibility for the expenditure of the money and will offer a proper safeguard against extravagance as the council in the present state of our municipal finances is not likely to endorse any proposition that would waste the public funds.

BOLSHEVISM APPLIED

Every revolutionist, from the days of Absolutism down, has complained of "officialdom."

The near-Bolsheviks of this

under an amendment of the constitution to be enforced conjointly by the federal and state governments—unless the whole amendment be overruled by a decision of the supreme court of the United States.

A NEW TREATY

The provision for treaty binding the United States and England to come to the aid of France if necessary to compel Germany to comply with the treaty of Versailles is something which the French government demanded as a source of security against German treachery and German disregard of international compacts. Whether this will be received with favor in this country remains to be seen. It was assumed by most people that the League of Nations would serve this purpose without any other combination, but it seems that France was not satisfied to depend upon the league for protection. Possibly the impression prevailed that owing to the opposition of the United States, the future fate of the league was uncertain. Hence the mutual agreement between England and the United States to stand by France against any attempt on the part of Germany to break away from the treaty conditions, was insisted upon as the only sure means of protecting France in the future. The very existence of such a treaty would probably be sufficient to convince Germany that her safest course would be to follow out the provisions of the treaty to the best of her ability.

WILL RATIFY TREATY

Judging from expressions of leading officials in Germany it appears that the German government will ratify the treaty at an early day in order that the blockade may be lifted so as to permit the import of food and raw materials for manufacturing.

The terms of the treaty so hedge around the Germans with conditions that it is almost impossible for them with safety to evade any of its provisions. The people are anxious to return to normal conditions under which there will be an abundant supply of food and steady employment.

In order to meet the financial demands made under the peace treaty, the German government has decided upon a drastic system of taxation one which will probably result in the repudiation or temporary neglect of the German war debt.

In other words, there are more than four times as many officeholders under the Bolsheviks as there were under the czar and there were too many officeholders under the czar.

The natural result is given in the Isvestia, Bolshevik organ, of Dec. 1, 1918. It says: "With few exceptions, the mass of our officials are apathetic even to death, and appear only twice a month to draw their salaries."

It is a safe bet, however, that they show up at all the elections of soviets, etc.

Trotzky had a good training in the worst brand of politics in New York.

Trotzky is sure to apply in Russia the principle of "Give every man who can control votes for us a profitable job with little or nothing to do."

Knowing Trotzky and his training, it could have been predicted in advance that, under the Bolsheviks, there would be a steady increase in the number of officials and a steady decrease in the amount of work done for the government.

It is interesting to have the socialists of Europe confirming this as a fact.

WAR PROHIBITION

War prohibition is now in effect with certain reservations and is likely to remain until the forces called into service for the war, shall have been demobilized if congress does not repeal or modify the law in the meantime which is not at all probable.

President Wilson advised congress to modify the law so as to permit the sale of light wines and beer, but congress refused to assume the responsibility for so doing and the president cannot annul an act of congress.

Thus the law is now in effect and it should be faithfully observed.

There is still a question, however, as to the meaning of the word "intoxicating" as applied to beers.

The matter is under consideration by the Department of Justice and court decisions dealing with the question are pending; but congress seems disposed to settle the controversy by passing an amending act providing that any beer containing over one or half of one per cent alcohol shall be deemed intoxicating and prohibited.

Demobilization may be complete in August or September after which the liquor business will be legalized until national prohibition takes effect next January. Then will come the new era of a bone dry nation

SEEN AND HEARD

How are you making it?

The fellow with the well stocked sideboard will have many friends.

Lot of half cent is coming into its own. And the raisin, oh, you raisin, how long will it be before you're raisin' the kick out of the half cent glass? Then Susie McGoosey will say,

"Then lips that touch raisins Shall never smack mine."

A hundred years ago Sir Tom Noon Tailor thought—"Tis a little thing to give a cup of water; yet its draught of cool refreshment, draught by fevered lips, may give a shock of pleasure to the frame more exquisite than when nectarine juice renews the life of joy in happiest hours."

Some fevered lips yesterday, we'll say.

By D. B. Joyful

There sure was some crowd at John Barleycorn's wake and, as at any well regulated wake repartee was keen. One fellow wearing a daisy was joked a bit about it, but he made a good comeback. He said that every mourner present should have worn a daisy. The daisy, he said, is a great device to conserve moisture and to down the litter that followed this remark he proceeded to quote Wadsworth, as follows:

"The daisy, by the shadow that it casts,
Protects the lingering dewdrop from the sun."

The July Version

He had climbed on the outside of 1 chocolate frappe, 1 nut sundae, 2 cherry sodas, 1 banana split, 2 strawberry sodas, 1 matted milk, 1 pineapple so when in rushes his little daughter, wearing her last week's silk dress, and a hat she had already had on twice (think of the poverty in that home!) The fountain fles hung their heads in shame. Some of 'em slinked out the back door. They, too, had homes neglected, wives who had nothing but a last year's limousine to ride around in. Susie spoke! Anxiously she gazed up into the face of her father:

"Father, dear father, come home with me now."

Four of 'em signed the pledge there and then.

Calling Names

There was an argument right from the start.

He on the one side—she on the other.

They argued about it day after day—night after night, and still got no nearer a solution than at first.

It was fought out bitterly on both sides.

II

A year had gone by and still the baby was not named.

He was all for calling it something real—like Bill—Tom—Bob—Joe—Jim—Pug—Al—or Ben, after his side of the family.

She was decided on calling it something fancy like Horatio, Charlotroy—Axlemon—Reginald—Quintus—or Fauntieroy, after her side of the family.

Two more years passed swiftly and still the baby was called Toots.

"I'll tell you what!" exclaimed a mutual friend. "The first bottle I pull out of this medicine closet, why whatever is on the label, we'll name the baby that."

He and she looked at each other the first time in three years.

"All right," they agreed.

"Benzoin," he read aloud.

And Benzoin it was.

IV

After little Benzoin came girl twins—Odie and Quinny (Iodine and Quinine). Then came Roxie (Peroxide), Linn (Liniment), Rine (Glycerine) and Cassie (Castorole); the mutual friend officiating at the ceremony, as before, etc., etc., until all the botties were used—Detroit Free Press.

A Rhyme of Indignation

Bill Bay State has again discovered, by painful calculation,

That he is losing dough galore to give us transportation.

So he again must raise the fares, which fills him with elation.

Although the public will resent this direct proportionation.

But now the shortest route will cost a dime from any point or station.

And if this scheme is a success it will surely be a sensation.

Long years ago in the woolly West in the youth of this great nation,

The stage coach traffic was oft upset by a robber's depredation.

He stopped along and behind a cliff at a dizzy elevation.

And while you grumbled and kicked in vain he plied his chosen vocation.

He pushed a gun into your face with a guitars imprecation.

And if you failed to come across from the planet you'd take a vacation.

But now the tables are reversed, he's changed his habitation.

He left the oft marauded West for a softer occupation.

Now every day we see his gun ere we reach our destination.

For here the Bay State gunfire man now meets no molestation.

THE MAN ABOUT TOWN

I understand that there is a little dissatisfaction in connection with the awarding of Carney medals at the high school this year. One instance of this comes from a young man who headed the list of those receiving honorable mention at the exercises last Wednesday evening, but who believes that his four years' work at the high school entitles him to a medal. It may be well to explain that the right of a student to a high school diploma is based on two fundamental principles by the school authorities. In the first place, the student is credited with five so-called "points" for every full study he completes successfully and two and a half "points" for every successfully completed half study. When it comes time for a student to graduate he must have completed enough studies in his three, four or five years at the school to give him a total of "points" sufficient to correspond with the regulations specifying how many points are needed for the varying classes of diplomas.

Naturally, a graduate does not need as many "points" to receive a three year diploma as for a four year diploma, and so on. The second principle upon which diplomas are awarded is, the average rank obtained in all the studies which the pupil has successfully passed.

Unless this average rank reaches a certain point—65 per cent, I believe—the student is not entitled to his diploma. Thus both the quantity and quality of the student's work are taken into consideration when it comes time to give him his diploma.

The same method is followed out in making the special awards, such as the Carney medals, but only in part.

Merely the quality and not the quantity of the student's work is taken into consideration. This is where the young man in question objects to the system of awarding the medals. He claims to have obtained 90 points in subjects connected with the straight college course and his average rank in these subjects was more than that obtained by one of the young men who did receive the medal.

However, he points out that he completed many more subjects than his competitor and his average in the majority of his studies was better than that of the young man who received the medal for a slightly higher rank in fewer studies. Inasmuch as the medal is awarded for "excellence of character and scholarship," he believes that the efforts of a pupil should be taken into consideration. He claims too, he took the study which brought down his rank merely to improve himself and the result was not such as to encourage other pupils to follow suit.

Cherries are ripe. There is probably little news in this fact insofar as the ripeness of the cherries is concerned as to the polled department it means considerable. From every quarter of the city complaints are being received that trees are being robbed by nocturnal visitors. Mrs. Smith complains that practically all of her cherries have been stolen and Mrs. Brown says that the limbs have been knocked from her cherry trees. If every report of stolen cherries were assigned for inspection this year, a great many police officers would be engaged in running down the cherry thieves. The best that can be done is to advise the police on the beats to watch sharply for the youthful robbers and this they are doing under orders from headquarters.

A noticeable feature about the recent graduations at the grammar schools has been the singing. Not only has it been of an exceptional quality as to the choice of selections but it showed unmistakably that particular attention had been given to expression. Years ago school singing in many public schools was an effort to "out-noise" the other fellow. By striking contrast, the singing in the schools today is particularly sweet and harmonious. In fact the effort seems to be to attain harmony rather than volume. It is certainly a change for the better.

WELCOME HOME

MURDER'S WIFE, BEATS CHILDREN, KILLS SELF

WORCESTER, July 2.—After 10 years of practically constant intoxication Maurice Sheehan of 25 Everard street, this city, murdered his wife and committed suicide early yesterday morning after he had returned from his last debauch. Sheehan first attacked his wife with a hammer, and afterward fired two shots from a revolver into her body.

For more than 10 years Sheehan had done no work, his wife supporting the family by scrubbing floors at the Worcester hospital. Though friends urged her to leave him she refused to do so for the sake of her children. She said she believed him too much of a coward to ever carry out the threat of killing her which he often made.

Sheehan returned to the house shortly after midnight and entered his wife's room. There he found one of his four daughters with the mother. He sent the 14-year-old girl from the room with a cuff in the face and then attacked his wife with the hammer. Meanwhile the other children, one of them a baby scarcely a year old, were cowering in the next room. After the murder of his wife he drove the other children from the house with curses and blows and turned the revolver on himself. Both were dead when neighbors were informed by the children. The oldest daughter, Mary, is in the hospital, as the result of the blows the murderer struck her.

WHY SURRENDER TO OLD AGE WHEN YOUTHFULNESS IS NATURE'S WAY!

BY DIANA WATTS

World's Youngest Middle-Aged Woman and International Authority on Physical Secrets of the Ancient Greeks; Author of "The Renaissance of the Greek Ideal."

Why does the woman approaching 40 surrender herself to the deadly belief that she is physically on the down grade?

I am afraid the answer that would fit most cases is, "Laziness"; a condition of laziness induced by the general fatigue that is regarded as the normal condition of middle life.

Study the average woman of 35 and over, as she walks in front of you on the streets. She looks as though she had a leg at each corner. No joints at the knees, no springs in the feet; a lax, crumpled-up diaphragm, sagging muscles, and a general air of stiff, weary sloppiness.

You would say that youth had left such a body forever. You would think it impossible that a woman of 40—even a woman physically inferior and handicapped—could attain strength, grace, lightness, and beauty more attractive than that of her girlhood.

Yet I know it is not only possible, but altogether practicable. Nor is it so terribly difficult. I know, because I have done it myself. In the process of rebuilding my own body, I discovered, worked out and verified the

LIFT YOUR CHIN AND "WALK ON AIR"

Here is a preliminary exercise for keeping the body lightsome and young:

Lift your chin quite clear from the neck, and keep your whole body from shoulder to hip quite still and erect, while walking upstairs, downstairs or on a level.

Stand on the balls of the feet until you are in perfect balance, then in walking carry your weight forward, so that it will never be out of balance, but always in a perfectly vertical line above the foot which supports it.

Remember the lifted chin, the still waist, the vertical line from hip to shoulder, the perfect balance every instant—you will find that the metaphor of "walking on air" has become a reality.

physical system of the ancient Greeks.

It is hardly too much to say that the Greek system contains the secret of perpetual youth, mental no less than physical.

I am nearly 50 years old. Recently I swam two miles without rest and with little fatigue. I can walk all day, teach all day, write all day. In the Yale swimming pool I did certain feats of balanced diving that were impossible for the skillful athletes of the university. In leaping, turning somersaults, jumping from moving trolley cars or busses, throwing the discus and climbing mountains, I am a fit competitor for the best trained American college girls in their early twenties.

I fully expect to be doing these things when I am 60, 70 or 75.

It is natural to do them. What is unnatural is the commonly found condition of heaviness and stiffness.

There is no reason on earth why a woman of 40 should be less attractive than the woman of 20; there is every reason why she should be infinitely more so. For she can make her body as youthful as a girl's, while retaining all her added charm of experience and quiet serenity.

Body and mind are two chords in a harmony. The fatigue caused by the vacillating movements of an unbalanced, unstrung body is intimately related to mental uncertainty and indecision.

The modern person lacks a fundamental principle that may be applied to every sort of movement and occupation in life. This is precisely what the Greeks possessed. It made them the most wonderful people in every way that the human race has known.

So natural is this principle that, once grasped by the mind and enforced by the will, every movement becomes an exercise. Artificial exercising is needed only at first.

PRICE OF SPECIAL CARS ADVANCED

A meeting of the committee in charge of the annual outing of the members of the A. G. Pollard Co.'s Employees' Mutual and Benefit association, which is scheduled to take place Thursday, July 16, will be held this evening for the purpose of reconsidering its action in relation to the hiring of special electric cars for the trip to Nantasket beach, where the outing is to be held.

A couple of weeks ago when the committee decided to hold the outing at Nantasket a number of electric cars sufficient to convey the excursionists to the beach were hired from the Bay State Street Railway Co. at a certain price per car, but yesterday the committee was notified that inasmuch as the company had increased its rate, an extra charge would be made for the special electrics. It is the consensus of opinion that the contract for the cars will be cancelled and that automobile trucks will be used for the transportation of the clerks to the seashore. This matter will be decided at this evening's meeting.

TO MOVE INTO THE MOVIES—

STUDY SHAKESPEARE

BY LILLIAN GISH, Famous Film Star
Do you long to "break into the movies"—to be a film star?

You think you would give the world if you could just talk to a real star and get some "pointers" on how it's done—and what the moving picture world is like from the inside?

I've been in the pictures for several years—and they do say I'm a success—I only know I have worked—and I love it—and if my experience can help any girl to gain her heart's desire and teach her the first steps of a move into the movies—I'm glad. Here's that advice so often craved:

Study Shakespeare before you enter the door of a moving picture studio!

Such advice may seem strange, because the supreme playwright of all time lived some hundreds of years before the first camera was fashioned, but hearts beat the same then, and the eyes were the window of the soul, and sensitive faces spoke the mind of humankind. The camera merely records facial expression, and in the case of moving pictures, the play of emotion on the features and movement tells on a screen what Shakespeare related in a book.

Learn Shakespeare well, for oh, it does seem as if he wrote all that has ever been said since. He anticipated all of our slang, his dramatic plots are the ones that we think we discover, the ones that we think we invent.

and call new, and his lines will never perish.

Then attend good plays, study Mrs. Fiske, the one woman in our country who has all the finesse of perfection. Watch people, observe faces. Go to the mirror, and make your face do what your mind does. Make people believe that you are living your part, not only acting it. That will not do now. We have passed beyond that idea of "good acting."

Well, to resume, the girl who goes to Chicago, New York or San Francisco, to enter moving pictures, should take along plenty of money, or stay at home, because the process is slower than a peace conference. Mr. Griffith and other producers have paid the return fare of many a poor girl who came from faraway to the city of the studio, and waited and waited desperately for a chance which was never hers, because she didn't fit requirements of the time.

The first thing to do is go to the studio and register. Just sign your name, as an applicant. A record is taken of every girl; her height, age, color of eyes and hair, character of features. When a new production is planned the management determines the quantity and quality of talent required, and goes over the registry record to find out which applicants might do. Then a test is made, of each face. An ordinary still photograph won't do. That face must be tried out as a moving picture, to make sure of its possibilities. Its merits or shortcomings for the purposes in mind.

After registering, if a girl isn't offered anything at once (and she won't be) the thing for her to do is to find a place to stay within her means, and then just live for opportunity. Every morning go early to the studio, take along a book, or some sewing, and try to concentrate on them to keep from being nervous over the tedious wait. You may have to live that way for many, many days, or weeks, perhaps—just waiting. Persistence may win. Indifference can't.

Dress simply and act like a lady. In about managers, they appreciate good girls.

that is, managers of pictures worth while do.

So dress simply, for instance in a dark blue tailored suit, with a plain belt. Have your hair brushed well, be neat and clean. Be simple and sincere in your manner, not affected. Don't be made up. If you do get into moving pictures you'll find that the cameras will penetrate through your makeup.

To Honor Service Men

Westford street from 7:30 to 8:30. Friday morning. At 8:30 the parade line will form in Westford street and at 8 start winding its way over the principal down-town streets. In the afternoon all service men will have an opportunity to see the New England league baseball game at Spalding park free because tickets will be given them at the armory in the morning. The final feature of the day will be an exhibition of fireworks on the South common in the evening, where the service men will be given reserved positions.

Every effort will be made to have the service man, no matter what branch of the army or navy or marine corps he was associated with, feel that the day has been set apart for his special honor.

Although a complete roster is not yet available, a general idea of what proportions the morning parade will assume was evident last evening from the numbers of organizations that had signified their intentions of taking part. Present plans call for four divisions, the war veterans' division, the semi-military division, civic division, and fraternal division. In all, more than 50 organizations have already been lined up to participate.

One of the features of the parade will be the advance guard of motor-cycles under the direction of Lieut. Harold E. Dyer and his staff. This will lead the entire parade and will form in Colonial avenue at 7:30 and then proceed to the state armory. Local dealers have offered a total of 77 prizes to the best appearing features in this division.

The local lodge of Elks has voted to take part in the parade and will have an automobile division. Members who have machines will enter them in the parade and those who have no machines are invited to take seats in those of other members or in machines provided by the lodge. The autos will be decorated and three prizes offered for those presenting the best appearance.

CARD OF THANKS

We wish to express our sincere thanks and appreciation to our relatives and friends and to the members of the Harvard Bowing company delegation for the many expressions of sympathy, spiritual bouquets and floral offerings in our recent bereavement in the loss of our dear father, Charles Shinkwin. REVIVE ANCIENT CUSTOM

U. S. and Britain will Help by Combined Action and Not Separately

PARIS, July 2. (Havas)—The Franco-British and Franco-American treaty, the Journal says, provide that the intervention of England and America, on behalf of France against Germany shall be inter-dependent. Great Britain and the United States will only help France by combined action and not separately. The paper declares that their intervention must occur if the disarmament of the Rhine territory is not sufficient to protect France from German aggression.

RAILROAD CONDUCTOR SAW TROUBLE AHEAD

F. E. Brown at 22 Newton St., Leominster, Mass., the well known railroad conductor, says: "I suffered for a long time with kidney and bladder trouble. I had very great pains in my back and I think this trouble started from a shock I had last July. I got so bad I knew I would have to have relief soon and as a friend of mine said about Goldine thought No. 24 I would try it. I will gladly tell anyone about Goldine and what it did for me." Jerry Billiz says: "I had stomach trouble so bad that every thing I ate would sour and would form a gas which caused me a great deal of suffering. I began taking Goldine and it has saved ten times the money it cost as I am able to work on my farm now."

Ask Joseph Aubrey what benefit he has received from GOLDINE.

PRES. WILSON WORKS ON MESSAGE ON WAY HOME

Quaint Ceremonial Marks Reading of King's Proclamation of Peace Signed

ON BOARD U.S.S. GEORGE WASHINGTON Tuesday, July 1 (By the Associated Press).—The presidential voyage continues under most favorable conditions, with calm seas and mild, sunny weather. President Wilson has done some work on his message to Congress, in which he will submit the treaties, protocols and general results achieved at the Paris conference, but on advice of Rear Admiral Grayson, his physician, he is giving considerable time to rest and recuperation, after the strenuous days he has just left behind and for those through which he soon must pass.

The ceremony began at St. James' palace, where Sir Henry Farnham Burke, garter king of arms, accompanied by a number of state officers garbed in tabards, read the proclamation after six state trumpeters sounded their call. A procession then formed headed by an escort of life guards, trumpeters and numerous heralds. Officials in state robes, riding in carriages or on horseback, moved through the city to the points where different heralds read the proclamation.

A temporary barrier was erected at Temple Bar to mark the city's confines and a herald demanded admission to the city in the ancient form from the lord mayor and the corporation, waiting in robes at the barrier.

The mayor and corporation then joined the procession on its way to Cheapside and the Royal Exchange.

RECALL MEDIEVAL TIMES HIGHWAY COMMISSION SUSPENDS LICENSES

(Special to The Sun.)

STATE HOUSE, Boston, July 2.—John F. Sharkey of Lowell has been noticed by the Massachusetts highway commission that his license to operate motor vehicles in this state has been suspended by the commission, pending an investigation of the accident in which he was involved June 17 and which resulted in the death of Vincenzo Matillasso. Upon the commission's decision, after the investigation, as to the blame for the accident, will depend whether the license will be reinstated or permanently revoked. Sharkey has been driving as a chauffeur.

The commission has suspended for a period of two months the chauffeur's license of Burgo Caverly of Dracut, it having found that on April 22, while driving in Ayer, he operated an automobile in a reckless manner, as a result of which it was involved in an accident.

Such bonds or notes shall be denominated: Lowell high school loan, act of 1919, shall be payable in not more than 20 years from the date of issue, and shall bear such rates of interest as may be fixed by the city treasurer with the approval of the mayor.

"The city auditor and city treasurer shall act for the commission as for other city departments. The city treasurer shall keep separate all funds received for the purpose of constructing, equipping and furnishing the said building and shall pay the same as directed by the commission."

chapter 718 of the acts of 1913 and amendment thereof and in addition thereto, and all provisions of law relating to municipal indebtedness, shall otherwise apply to all loans made under authority of this act.

"The municipal council shall authorize the borrowing of money at such times and in such amounts as may be voted by the high school building commission and it shall be the duty of the treasurer of the city to execute the bonds or notes in the name of the city and of the mayor to countersign the same. The municipal council may, before authorizing said loan, require the building commission to submit plans with the estimated cost of constructing, equipping and furnishing said high school, and in case the said estimate is in excess of the sum herein authorized to be borrowed and previously appropriated, may refuse to authorize the whole or any part of the loan authorized by this act."

"The city auditor and city treasurer shall act for the commission as for other city departments. The city treasurer shall keep separate all funds received for the purpose of constructing, equipping and furnishing the said building and shall pay the same as directed by the commission."

"Section 3. This act shall take effect upon its passage."

IMPROVEMENT IN EXCHANGE RATES

Development of Peace in Austria—Leaders Predict Outbreaks of New Wars

Says Germany Now Stands at Head of Oppressed Peoples of the World

England and America Masters of Millions—France Watch Dog of Europe

VIENNA, Sunday, June 29.—(By the Associated Press)—News regarding the prospects of peace has made no special impression upon the people of the republics formed from the former dual monarchy, because of their own myriad difficulties, but one development is the improvement of exchange rates. It is the general feeling that the central empires have suffered more through the blockade, uncertainty and internal disorders during the protracted conference at Paris than in any year of the war.

Leaders of the old regime, including Count Karolyi, formerly provisional president of Hungary; Count Czernin, formerly Austro-Hungarian foreign minister, and Count Albert Apponyi, formerly Hungarian premier, predict the outbreak of new wars, due to the failure of the peace conference to approve President Wilson's principle of the self-determination of nations.

The press continues to encourage the idea that the peace being dictated to the central empires is unjust.

The clerical Reichspost describes it as making Germany a vassal of France, adding:

"Germany now stands at the head of the oppressed peoples of the world, which brings it more honor than when under imperial rule. Its mission will be to free enslaved Ireland, Egypt and India."

"The victory was a capitalistic one," says the Neue Freie Presse. "England and America are now the absolute masters of hundreds of millions and like Emperor Hadrian of Rome, can impose the economic death sentence on refractory nations by withholding food. The role of France is to be watch dog of Europe."

"The worst days of Germany are past. She has lost the war and has been cruelly treated, but she will be again in the markets of the world quicker than her enemies think."

The witness would not confess pro-Germanism, although often pressed by his inquisitor.

"Well, you were not pro-alley," insisted Mr. Lucking.

"Well, it might be said that we were not pro-British," replied Captain Patterson, slowly.

Editorials, in which submarine operations were characterized as points of international law over which the American people were not prepared to go to war, were read.

One editorial, based on rumors that Ambassador von Bernstorff might be recalled from Washington, expressed the opinion that von Bernstorff had been a great power in preventing a rupture between the two countries. Mr. Lucking characterized it as pro-German, but the witness said: "It was a mistake."

Mr. Lucking read President Wilson's appeal to the press on March 25, 1916, urging the press not to refer to Gen. Pershing's pursuit of Villa as a war and to avoid hurting Mexican sensibilities.

"At this very time the Tribune was urging intervention, was it not?" asked Mr. Lucking. "Yes."

The witness said he did not see the editorial headed "Ford is an anarchist" on which the suit is based, before it went into the paper.

FORD-TRIBUNE SUIT

Patterson, a Defendant, Calls Paper's Praise of Bernstorff a Mistake

MT. CLEMENS, Mich., July 2.—After eight weeks of the Ford-Chicago Tribune libel suit the first principal in the case to take the stand formally appeared in the person of Capt. Joseph Medill Patterson, who, with his cousin, Col. E. R. McCormick, is a defendant.

He occupied the stand all the session, with the exception of a few minutes. The testimony dealt with the Tribune's attitude toward Mexico and toward Germany and the allies before the United States entered the world war. Brief direct examination was by Atty. Weymouth Kirkland of Tribune, counsel, and cross-examination by Attorney William Lucking, for Henry Ford.

Mr. Lucking devoted much time to the reading of several editorials from the Tribune in an endeavor to show that the newspaper was pro-German. In effect Captain Patterson stated that the Tribune and President Wilson had always differed on the Mexican problem and still differ. In 1911, at the climax of the Madero revolution, he testified, his paper believed the Mexicans could solve their own problems. By 1916, however, this opinion underwent a change by reason of the continued disorder and disorganization south of the Rio Grande, and the editors became convinced that only armed intervention, such as that employed in Cuba, could bring order out of chaos. The editors believed such action would be to the interests of the United States and Mexico alike.

"And you thought that it would please Germany to have the United States occupied with Mexico?" asked Attorney Lucking.

"Yes, I think so."

The witness would not confess pro-Germanism, although often pressed by his inquisitor.

"Well, you were not pro-alley," insisted Mr. Lucking.

"Well, it might be said that we were not pro-British," replied Captain Patterson, slowly.

BIG INCREASE IN USE OF AUTOMOBILES

(Special to The Sun)

STATE HOUSE, Boston, July 2.—That the number of automobiles used in the state is steadily increasing from month to month is indicated in figures given out by the highway commission today which show that 23,455 more cars were in operation during the six months period between January 1 and June 30 of this year, as compared with figures for the same period in 1918.

The number of pleasure cars registered up to June 30 of this year was 151,245, as against 127,760 for the same date in the compilation of last year. The 151,245 figure for the first six months of 1919 completely eclipses the figure for the entire year of 1918 when 142,600 number plates were given out, indicating that the use of cars has more than doubled in that space of time.

In respect to commercial vehicles a decided increase is also noted. In the first six months of the current year 35,321 plates were issued, as against 29,356 for the same period of last year and 33,935 for the entire span of 1918.

The cash receipts up to July 1, 1919, were practically equal to the entire receipts of the entire year of 1918, the one period bringing in $2,151,922 as compared with $2,154,408 for the other.

In commenting upon these figures, Commissioner James W. Synan says:

"It seems to me that the registration of automobiles is simply limited to the output of the factories. Never has business equalled that of the last few months in our automobile department. June 30 was one of the busiest days of the year and every day finds the receipts beyond all expectations, based upon previous figures."

The probability is that if anything like this ratio of increase continues from 165,000 to 170,000 pleasure vehicles will be registered before the end of the present year, and at least 40,000 trucks. If the receipts from the registration of motor vehicles are left with the commission and are left for use in selling and repairing state highways and for other road work it will not be long before the receipts will reach the $3,000,000 mark and will go far toward taking care of the highways so that it will be unnecessary to apply to the legislature each year for such substantial sums as otherwise would be necessary."

CHILDREN HAPPY AT COUNTRY CLUB

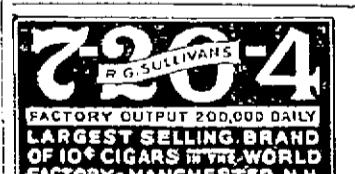

Children of members of the Vesper Country club had the time of their young lives at the club yesterday afternoon when more was done for their amusement than for the entertainment of the older folks in the annual ladies' day festivities. The weather was ideal and really has to be if this yearly event is to be enjoyed in fullest measure, and several hundred members, friends and children were present.

Flying horses, a Punch and Judy show, hurdy-gurdy music and innumerable extravagancies to delight the youthful stomach were literally showered upon the youngsters and they were not still a minute.

The D. I. Page Co. served a fine buffet supper late in the afternoon and the United States Cartridge Co. band gave a splendid concert. It was planned to make a mixed foursome golf event one of the features of the program, but it was called off because of the excessive heat. Dancing was enjoyed during the evening.

Mayor Harry D. Thompson, Harry Pollard and Hutchins Parker comprised the committee on arrangements.

GET ACQUAINTED WITH PEOPLE OF FINLAND

"America—let me make you acquainted with Finland, the stalwart young nation that's holding shut the western door against Russian bolshevism!"

Jacob de Julian, president of Finland's commercial mission to the United States, is thus introducing his homeland throughout this country: a land on which the spotlight played very little during the war, but which he pictures as the Gibraltar of Democracy on the Baltic.

Along the Finnish-Russian frontier, only a day's march from Petrograd, stand 40,000 well armed and resolute Finns.

"You folks ought to know our people much better than you do," said

Jacob de Julian

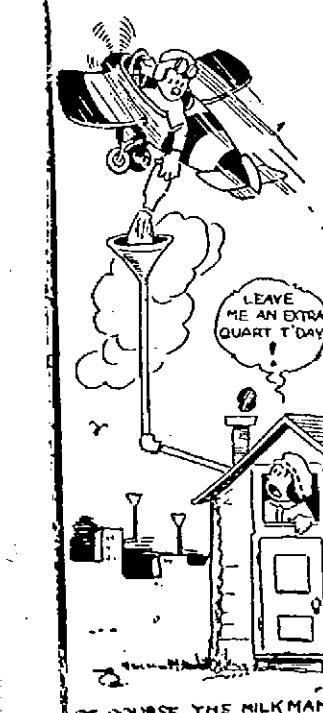

de Julian recently in San Francisco, one of many cities he is visiting to bring the Finnish producer and consumer in touch with the American. "It's a land decidedly worth knowing. Ten years ago Finland prepared herself for freedom by taking the most democratic step of all nations—universal suffrage for all over 21 years of age," de Julian proudly tells. "As many as 20 women at a time have recently sat in the councils of the nation. While the Russ peasant was refused the advantages of education, the Finn farmers took up the three

It's and absorbed them to the extent of abolishing illiteracy from the confines of the grand duchy.

"Just as Finland repudiated the taint of czarism, it has repulsed the equally dreadful slavery of bolshevik absolutism. Finland maintained democracy to a large extent, even under the czar; as an independent nation she will maintain democracy in its purest form. This means no one class subservient to another.

"Finland resisted bolshevism," says de Julian, "because the Finnish peasant, comprising 60 per cent. of the population, is a freeholder. He is literate; he has suffrage rights, and he opposes confiscation of private property where property owners have not encroached on the public welfare."

The paroled Finns of the defeated Red Guard are now satisfied that bolshevism is a political failure. The eight-hour industrial shift has been nationalized, with the exception of agricultural workers. The abbreviated Finnish summer forbids short hours in the field. Wages have been raised. Industrial accident insurance has been introduced.

"Plants which once worked 12-hour shifts now have three daily shifts of eight hours each. Even with the wages advanced and the hours shortened, the manufacturer has found the eight-hour shift results in better workmanship and fuller production.

"A constitutional assembly has been elected by the direct ballot and there is no doubt that Finland is to be a republic. The monarchist group has been reduced to a minimum: the ultra-socialists have given way to the moderates and broad-minded democrats in undisputed control.

"Red propaganda that the Finnish

White Guard was the tool of capitalism and monarchial plotters has failed of its purpose to harm the new nation. Talk of inviting a German prince to rule the country has died with the disappearance of the German invaders. The lie that General Baron Mannerheim is of German descent has been exposed.

"Three generations ago the Mannerheims were Swedes. The regent's grandmother was a Finnish woman whose ancestors have always been Finns. There is no German blood in the Mannerheim family and the baronial title was conferred by a former ruler of Sweden. Mannerheim never approved the presence of German troops in Finland and resigned his leadership one week after the White Guard-German junction. He retired to Sweden where he remained until the Germans left and Finland recalled him to act as regent.

"Today there are two popular names in Finland—Mannerheim, who was a division general fighting the kaiser when Russia was an ally, and Herbert Hoover who fed Finland in its darkest hours.

"Finland's trade, once German, is America's for the asking."

DE VALERA THANKS ALL 75 WERE INJURED WHEN NEW ENGLAND DIRIGIBLE EXPLODED

BOSTON, July 2.—Eamon de Valera, president of the Irish republic, before leaving for New York, thanked the people of New England for the manner in which they received him, and especially members of the bench and bar committee for their efforts in making the Fenway park meeting and the receptions accorded him so successful.

He praised Inspectors Smith and Cannon of the Boston police department, who have traveled with him since his arrival in Boston, telling them that it was an unexpected contrast to have officials concerned for his safety rather than, as has been his experience in England and Ireland, having them hunt him like a criminal.

President De Valera issued the following message to the people of New England through Daniel T. O'Connell, representing the bench and bar committee:

"The cordial reception given me by the executive officers and people of the state of Massachusetts and New Hampshire has convinced me that the people of America will not be content with sympathizing with the cause of Ireland in their hearts, but will seek an early opportunity of expressing it definitely in act through their executive head.

"I did not need to come to Boston or to America to know that Americans would not lend themselves to an act of injustice against an ancient nation that has clung to its traditions and maintained its spirit of independence through seven centuries of blood and tears."

"In the name of Ireland, I thank you."

HUNGARIAN REDS DEFY THE ALLIES

Defiance Expressed in Proclamation to Red Army by Soviet Government

To Defend to Last Drop of Blood the Proletarian Dictatorship

COPENHAGEN, July 2.—Defiance to the entente powers is expressed in a proclamation to the Red army issued by the Hungarian Soviet government, according to a Budapest despatch received here. After referring to "The great sacrifice demanded by the proletarian fatherland in asking the army to evacuate parts of the territory conquered in glorious battle" and proceed to territory occupied by Rumanian troops, the proclamation continues:

"We are not retiring before the mercenary troops of the Czecho-Slovak imperialists. We have to do with the entire power of the greatest exploiters of the world—the French, British and American money kings, labor oppressors and peasant plunderers. We know a dictated peace is no peace and we shall not lay down our rifles because we are defending to the last drop of blood the proletarian dictatorship."

British Dirigible

ceremony than that which attended the departure of dirigibles for their monotonous North Sea patrol" during the war.

Shortly before the first streaks of dawn broke over the plains, the great airship was quietly taken out of its air dome and turned around until the nose was pointed straight west.

The command "heads off" was given and the huge envelope quickly rose. Before the height of 500 feet was reached she was lost in view in the mist. The whirr of the propellers could be heard for several minutes after the airship went out of sight.

Weather reports indicate that the attempt a trans-Atlantic flight.

R-34 will meet unsettled conditions, with variable winds, until she is some distance out into the Atlantic. Then it is expected she will have following winds which will assist her.

Not more than a score of people motored the 21 miles from Edinburgh to the airrome here to witness the start, but among them was one American woman who presented a silk American flag to Lieut. Commander Zachary Lansdowne, American flight commander, just before he stepped into the gondola.

The 300 men and 160 women stationed at the air dome were called out at 2 a. m. by the usual "landing party" bugle, and the drowsy and faltering step of many of them evidenced the fact that the start of this historic trip had not kept them awake.

They took their accustomed place at the guy wires and bars at the lower parts of the gondolas.

The ship was towed to point about 300 yards away from the air dome and after she was turned around her five powerful motors started humming.

Then the "hands off" bugle was sounded, the airship started to rise, her propellers began to spin and almost before the cheering had ceased the great flier had disappeared in the mist.

Before the start of the trans-Atlantic flight, Lieut. Commander Zachary Lansdowne, U.S.N., on board at the invitation of the British admiralty said:

"There is no doubt whatever in my mind, or I believe in the minds of any of the crew, that we will get over without difficulty."

Commander Lansdowne is a firm believer in the practicability of the lighter-than-air machine and has devoted all his time during the war to studying this branch of navigation.

"It was very good of the admiralty," he continued, "to extend an invitation to our navy department that an American be included in the crew on this pioneer flight. I see no particular reason why the admiralty should have selected me but, believe me, I am glad of the opportunity."

"As I understand it, we will not attempt any speed trial. We will cross as quickly as possible, avoiding adverse winds, but at the same time not overlooking any opportunity for observations likely to be of aid in the future to navigators and airship pilots crossing the Atlantic."

The plant British dirigible R-34 is the first lighter-than-air machine to fast to its moorings.

A special fire detachment and four airships, the largest of its kind in the world, measures 631 feet from nose to stern and carries three boats below the gas bag.

She has a gas capacity of 12,000,000 cubic feet, and is commanded by Major G. H. Scott of the Royal Air Force with a crew of 23 men. The craft is equipped with a wireless system as powerful as that of the great ocean liners.

It has been estimated that the R-34 will cross the Atlantic in from 60 to 70 hours under favorable conditions. Announcement has been made, however, that no attempt will be made to establish a time record for the crossing, the comfort of the dirigible's crew being given first consideration.

With favorable weather, the R-34 is expected to parallel the route of the northern steamship lanes, but should adverse weather conditions be encountered she probably will take the southern course, passing over or near the Azores.

The landing will be made at Roswell Field, Mincola, L. I. Accommodations for 200,000 persons to witness the landing have been provided.

The R-34 recently made a 56-hour trip into the Baltic, during which she covered approximately 2000 miles.

Expect Blimp Friday

MINNEOLA, N. Y., July 1.—Lieut. Col. Frederick W. Lucas, of the Royal Air Force, one of the advance party here arranging for the reception of the British dirigible now en route to Long Island from Scotland, said early today that he was inclined to believe the ship would not arrive before late Friday. The R-34 will be moored at Roosevelt Field while waiting to put back quickly for England.

Three special wireless stations constructed at the field in connection with the flight will be tuned up to catch the first message from the dirigible. Officers expect communication will be established when she comes within 600 miles of the coast.

It is expected the landing will not be made until after dusk in order to permit the gas bag to cool and its contents to contract, thus decreasing the lifting tendency of a dirigible tightened by a long flight. More than 1000 members of special balloon companies contributed by American army and navy authorities will be on the field to assist in making the air lines fast to its moorings.

A special fire detachment and four ambulances will also be stationed on the field.

The grounds will be patrolled by more than 1000 provost guards. Special grandstands have been provided for guests, who will include army and navy officers. The general public will be permitted to watch the landing outside the line of guards.

Aviation officers said it was possible New Yorkers might be able to observe the R-34's landing if they armed themselves with glasses and climbed to the top of their skyscrapers—providing the airship did not arrive in fog. If the craft is forced to cruise around until dark, she may circle over the city.

TEMPORARY QUARTERS FOR SCHOOL PUPILS

The desks, chairs and other pieces of furniture at the Cheever Street school have been removed to the basement of St. Joseph's college pending the time that new quarters are arranged for the accommodation of the 200 or more pupils, who attended the school, which for the past several years has been maintained by St. Joseph's parish as a parochial school.

The school building, which was formerly the property of the city, was sold a few years ago to Elie Delisle and at that time Mr. Delisle rented the property to the parish to be used as a parochial school. A couple of weeks ago Mr. Delisle sold the property to Sebastian Baretti, who has already made plans for the erection of a large garage on the site. It was learned this morning that pending the time that a new school building can be erected, the basement of the college in Merrimack street will be turned into two class rooms for small boys and that the house located in James street next to the sisters' home, and owned by the parish, will be converted into two classrooms for the little girls. The four new classes, it is expected, will be established when she comes within 600 miles of the coast.

It is expected the landing will not be made until after dusk in order to permit the gas bag to cool and its contents to contract, thus decreasing the lifting tendency of a dirigible tightened by a long flight. More than 1000 members of special balloon companies contributed by American army and navy authorities will be on the field to assist in making the air lines fast to its moorings.

FEDERAL RESERVE BOARD RAPS UNITED STATES U. S. EXPORT RECORD

By J. E. CONANT & CO.

OFFICE, LOWELL, MASSACHUSETTS

Optimism on Business Outlook Tempered With Warning Against Speculation

WASHINGTON, July 2.—Optimism as to the business outlook, reported today in the federal reserve board's monthly statement of conditions, was tempered with renewed warning against undue speculation.

"In nearly all the districts," the board's statement said, "the opinion is entertained that the prospects for a successful and prosperous year, with very large output of goods and almost unprecedented financial returns to manufacturers, agriculturists and laborers, now are positive. The possibility that speculation may be carried too far and may exert an injurious influence, aided and furthered by the existence of free credit and speculative tendencies, appears as the principal influence in the situation."

Prices continued to rise throughout June, and enormously heavy demand for goods for export had rendered products in many lines scarce. In nearly all districts it was reported business men had decided they could rely upon heavy demand and continually sustained prices for some time to come while a feeling of apprehension entered early in the year was disappearing; jobbers and retailers ready entering into large commitments for fall and winter.

Wheat, corn, cotton, tobacco and Pacific coast crops are expected to be harvested in record quantities. Livestock continues high in price. The fuel situation has been much below normal, with prospects of a light situation next winter.

Demand for fine cotton goods exceed production. Shoe factories are producing at maximum capacity, while heavy demand from Europe has drawn much of the available supply. Wool products are sold ahead for months. Automobile manufacturing is running in many plants at record levels.

Building shows continuation of the revival noted in previous months. Heavy buying of lumber by retailers has become general. There is much trading in houses and business property.

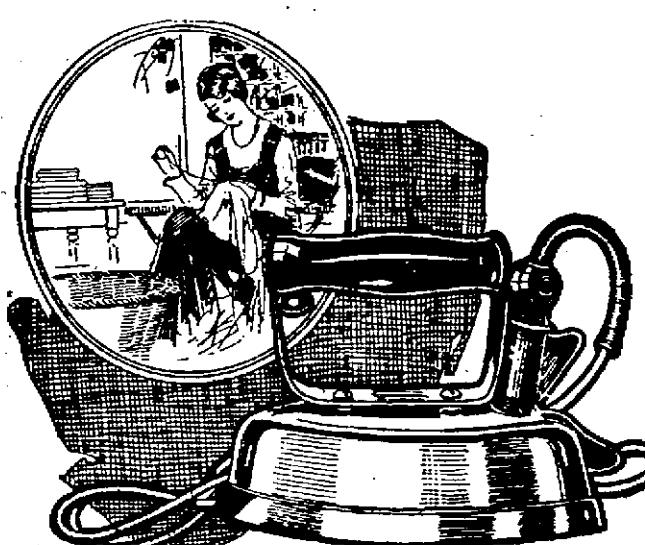

"The labor situation has now reached a distinctly advanced stage of full employment," says the board's statement. No reduction in wage scales is now foreseen.

"One of the principal things in the labor situation noted by thoughtful observers is the fact that clerks and office employees, as well as other workers receiving more or less fixed incomes, have not yet participated in the advance in wages. Improvement for these classes of workers will be necessary if prices are to continue at their present level, but will, of course, add correspondingly to the cost of business to the government.

Scheming to Capture German Trade, Says British Officer—Germany Needs Food

Largest Total in History of American Foreign Trade for Fiscal Year

WASHINGTON, July 2.—Germany possessed a sound case in claiming early relief, according to reports of British officers who visited Berlin in April to ascertain economic conditions. They reported that there was a genuine shortage of foodstuffs and the health of the population had suffered so seriously that the working classes had reached the stage of desperation where they could not be trusted to keep the peace.

The report states that a number of distressing cases of malnutrition, especially of children, was brought to the officers' attention. Some of these were in Breslau, where babies were given a weak spinach brew from soups, instead of milk. In reporting his visit to Berlin, East Prussia, West Prussia and Courland, Major Bertie stated that the allied policy of economic boycott would probably prove a complete failure as the United States was not prepared to co-operate in it and was "engaged in various schemes for capturing German trade as soon as the blockade is raised."

LOCAL LANDING FIELD

Flier From Devens Will Use Fair Grounds on Trip to Lowell Next Week

Whatever preparations Lowell will make toward the laying out or the designation of a landing field for airplanes, or water area for hydroplanes will be postponed until definite word comes from the Curtiss people as to just what that company desires here. Ensign George Garmon of this city, recently appointed New England representative for the Curtiss Airplane company, will work in co-operation with a landing field committee appointed by the local board of trade. Stephen Kearney is chairman of this committee.

However, the writer was in communication last Saturday evening with Lieut. Moffat of the air service, who at the present time has a machine at Camp Devens which is being used in connection with recruiting work. The plane is a Curtiss "H" equipped with a 150 horse power Hispano-Suiza motor and has a rear cockpit rigged for photographic work. Lieut. Moffat is planning to fly to Lowell some day soon and land on the old fair grounds in Gorham street, which is plenty large enough for a temporary airdrome. He will drop air service literature during his flight over the city, the details of which will be published in this paper just as soon as he plans the trip.

Passengers Jump From Trains Into Blazing Roadway and Flee for Their Lives

Fire Breaks Out on Elevated Structure, Destroying One Train and Part of Another—Passengers Leap From Cars and Dash Through Flames—Prevented From Jumping to Ground by Firemen—Many Carried Down Ladders to Safety—Station Agent Saves Many Lives

NEW YORK, July 2.—Fire at the South Ferry Terminal of the city's elevated structure today destroyed one train and part of another. Both trains were carrying passengers. Many of those on board, a large number of whom were women, had narrow escapes. They were rescued by firemen who raised ladders to the elevated structure and carried them to the ground. Reports that several persons had been killed had not been verified half an hour after the fire started.

The flames, which are believed to have started when an electric spark ignited grease which had accumulated under one of the cars, spread to the building which serves as the terminal for the municipal ferries from Staten Island and South Brooklyn. Firemen feared this structure would be destroyed.

Station Agent Saves Lives

Frank P. Tuttle, a station agent, probably saved the lives of some of the passengers by remaining at his post and sending a telegraph message which resulted in the electric current being turned off from the third rail, across which the escaping persons had to pass. Tuttle's own escape was cut off from flames and he collapsed after he had made his way through a window.

Flames in Check

Mounted police were called to assist the small army of reserves in holding in check the crowds which gathered.

NEW HIGH SCHOOL BILL

School Plans Must Be Submitted to City Council

COPY OF BILL

If the Massachusetts legislature sees fit to pass the act recommended by the committee on municipal finance this week to authorize the city of Lowell to incur indebtedness to the extent of $750,000 beyond the debt limit for the constructing and furnishing of a high school building; the money specified will not be at the disposal of the high school building commission until the latter body submits plans to the municipal council together with the estimated cost of the work.

Furthermore, if the estimate as submitted in the act, together with the $127,000 already to the credit of the commission, the council has the power to refuse to authorize any part of the loan to be used by the commission.

Thus, the act is so worded that it puts the financial end of the high school proposition almost wholly in the hands of the city council and the building commission must await the word from the council before it can go ahead.

MRS. GILLIGAN GIVEN LIFE SENTENCE

MIDDLETON, Conn., July 2.—With the consent of Judge John E. Keeler, counsel for Mrs. Amy E. Archer-Gilligan late yesterday entered a plea of second degree murder for causing the death of Franklin R. Andrews of Cheshire, May 30, 1914, at the Gilligan Home for the Aged in Windsor.

Life imprisonment in the state prison at Wethersfield was imposed at once. She had been on trial in the superior court here for the last 10 days.

Saved From Gallows

Change of plea came after a consultation between Benedict M. Holden, chief counsel for Mrs. Gilligan, and State's Attorney Hugh Alcorn. The prosecutor explained to the court that some doubt might exist as to whether Mrs. Gilligan was a free moral agent because of her use of drugs and the court agreed that such doubt might be entertained sufficiently by the jury to cause a second degree verdict.

Preceding the ending of taking of testimony State Policeman Hurley was on the stand giving rebuttal evidence for the state.

This was the second trial of Mrs. Gilligan. The first was in Hartford, in 1915, at which time she was found guilty in the first degree, sentenced to be hanged, and was reprieved by Governor Holcomb that she might appeal. On the appeal to the supreme court of errors she was granted a new trial. Change of venue was obtained and her second trial started in this city on June 12, many days being consumed in empanelling a jury and ten days of testimony followed.

After receiving her sentence Mrs. Gilligan was allowed time to part with her daughter, Mary Archer, who has been in court all during the trial. She will be taken to the state prison today.

BISHOP DELANY GENERAL ASSEMBLY, K. OF C. DISCUSSES SOCIAL EXPANSION

The summer meeting of Bishop Delany General Assembly, K. of C., held Monday evening, was signalized not only by an unusually large attendance but the discussion embraced many subjects having to do with the social expansion of the organization. Faithful Navigator Thomas B. Delany presided and several important communications were read. One had to do with a joint outing with Fr. Gabriel Druelle Assembly of Salem at the Willows, and another with participation in the Embarkation day observance of Bishop Cheverus Assembly in August. The proposition from Salem was discussed and referred pending something more definite.

Faithful Navigator Delany reported as a delegate to the state convention of the assemblies in May and gave a resume of the meeting. His report was supplemented by remarks by Faithful Purser William H. Gallagher, the other delegate. The latter favored a monthly bulletin as discussed at the convention as a progressive idea.

The financial officers of the assembly, the comptroller and the purser, announced that they would go over the financial affairs of the assembly this week with a view to clearing up outstanding bills before the opening of the fiscal year in October. Their report, tentatively drawn and showing a healthy financial condition, was presented to the assembly. The outlook for busy fall and winter is most promising. Under the head of the good of the order, interesting remarks were made by Grand Knight Robert R. Thomas, Deputy Grand Knight George F. Bragin, Sir Knights Albert E. O'Heir, John E. Hart, Daniel S. O'Brien, John J. O'Connor, John T. Buckley, John T. Burns and Hugh C. McSosker. It was announced that there would be no meeting in August in compliance with a time-honored custom.

WOMENEVERYWHERE

Praise Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound as the Greatest Remedy for Woman's Ills.

New Haven, Conn.—"For two years I suffered with a female weakness, pains in my back and painful periods, and I was so weak and tired that I was not able to do my work. A friend told me to use Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and it gave me great relief. My pains left me and I am now able to do my work and feel fine. You can publish my testimonial and if your Vegetable Compound does others as much good as it has me I will be very much pleased."

Mrs. CHARLES E. MORGAN, 37 Ses Street, New Haven, Conn.

The reason Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is so successful is because it contains the curative, strengthening properties of good old fashioned roots and herbs, which act directly on the female organism.

There are women everywhere who long for children in their homes yet are denied this happiness on account of some functional disorder which in most cases would readily yield to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Such women should not give up hope until they have given this wonderful medicine a trial, and for special advice write Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass. The result of 40 years' experience is at your service.

Col. Guthrie started his career as a brilliant criminal lawyer in Fredericton, N. B. Just previous to the war he won several criminal cases which attracted widespread attention. When the war began he placed across the door of his office a sign which said: "Gone for the duration of the war," and enlisted by telegraph.

He went abroad as a lieutenant colonel, and at Ypres passed through a gas attack from which in one battalion 33 men and four officers came out alive of an original complement of 1067 men. He received 27 wounds and was blinded. Later he recovered his sight and became active in recruiting.

He became familiar to New England men when he organized here the 236th Overseas Battalion, or the MacLean Killies. In March, 1918, this battalion reached France, where its members were distributed among other battalions.

Col. Guthrie was transferred to the Black Watch and remained with it until the end of the war.

He has applied to the Massachusetts state bar for permission to practice. By securing the endorsement both of the chief justice of his own province and of Massachusetts lawyers, he can receive permission to practice law here pending naturalization.

Col. Guthrie has a wife and three children at Fredericton, N. B., who will remain there until he has arranged a home for them in Boston.

Plans will also be made for the participation of the divisions in the Fourth of July parade. The meeting is to be one of the most important held for some time and a large attendance is expected. Dr. P. J. Bagley, president of the central council, will preside.

CAR OFF THE TRACK

As a result of the derailment of a street car on the Varnum avenue line yesterday afternoon the service was suspended for nearly three hours. Ordinarily the wrecking car would have made short work of the accident, but the Pawtucket bridge being under repair made it impossible for the wrecking crew to get to the scene. Supt. TURKS ORGANIZE THREE ARMIES

Situation Now Giving the Peace Conference Much Uneasiness

Officers of New Armies Refuse to Obey Orders From Constantinople

PARIS, Tuesday, July 1.—(By the Associated Press)—The Turkish situation is giving the peace conference much uneasiness. Reports received here indicate that there have been organized in Asiatic Turkey three Turkish armies whose generals refuse to obey orders from Constantinople. These armies are concentrated at Amasia, Balikesir and Konia. The Turks at Konia are threatening the Italians, while those at Balikesir are opposing the Greeks.

As the position of Constantinople has been much weakened by the refusal of the conference to consider proposals from the Turkish delegates immediately, it is feared that independent movements will develop throughout Asia Minor.

EFFECT OF PROHIBITION ON ICE BUSINESS

What about the ice it used to take to cool Lowell's malt and spirituous drinks?

No ice for that purpose is needed now but how much more ice is available for our community's needs now that all of us have been forced to join the United Order of Camels, Herd No. 21144?

One of the ways of estimating how much ice it took to cool the municipal booze is to go on the assumption that a saloon doing a business of any consequence at all would consume ten baskets of shaved ice daily giving a total weight of 500 pounds. Many places would have to have much more than this—sometimes twice this amount—and of course some places did not use as much as this. It is rather fair therefore to go on the theory that ten baskets, 500 pounds of ice per day, ought to be allotted as an average amount of ice for the 100 places in this city where liquor was sold. This gives 50,000 pounds or 25 tons. This again is an unsatisfactory result for 25 tons of ice is a small carload and who is prepared to argue that even a 15 ton carload of ice was enough to make the drinks cool during an average summer day?

Now we have got to have some talk about what will become of this unforeseen extra supply of ice we are to have through the shades being drawn in the booze emporiums and likewise some talk about whether icemen are to lose their jobs.

Miss Gage, head of the Gage Ice company, says not so as regards this latter possibility. She has jobs enough for all the husky boys who can juggle the ice cakes out of the wagons and be good to her big ice wagon horses. Yes, and turn in the entire receipts of money received for ice. No one is going to lose his job.

There were no "all saloon routes." An iceman might for instance fill up a person's ice chest and run along for 12 or 15 other home calls and then would reach an oasis, otherwise a saloon. He might be offered a drink and he might not. Booze has been selling high and why give it away when it could be sold?

This is one of the reasons why it cannot be ascertained as to how much ice was needed daily for the liquor dealers. Nearly every route would have at least one saloon on it.

As regards the ice made available through the closing of the saloons, it will be used up before the summer is over in just the normal demands of the homes. The supply of ice the Gage company has on hand is smaller than was probably the case this time last year but Miss Gage believes she has ice enough to see this season through as she has made a strong resolution not to sell any of her ice to outside dealers. There is but a small quantity of Merrimack river ice at the Gage ice house in Lowell because the weather was so unseasonable for ice cutting last winter on the river, consequently nearly all of Lowell's ice supply has to be carried in by railroad from Forge Village and South Chelmsford which, of course, makes it more expensive. Miss Gage had a new large ice house built at South Chelmsford last winter which she was able to have filled with ice.

Although the closing of the saloons means a loss to her business of at least $250 a day, Miss Gage says that it had some drawbacks. The ice had to be shaved in baskets for the basket was the unit of measure and even the best of baskets could not stand wear very long. It took quite a lot of the iceman's time to prepare the ice and he had to attend to the liquor trade customers the first thing in the morning. Many times the liquor men rebelled at paying more for their ice than anyone else in the community.

FARMS FOR SOLDIERS ON EASY TERMS

Lowell soldiers who have been discharged from the service but who are not satisfied with the employment in which they are now engaged will be interested in a proposition of the federal government to provide such men with farms to be paid for over a long term of years. The details of the plan are contained in a booklet, issued by the department of the interior, a large number of copies of which have been received at the local army recruiting station, 117 Merrimack street. These booklets will be given free of charge to any man discharged from the army who is interested in the project.

SNAKE SHOW ADVANCE

MEN ARRESTED

A snake charmer appeared in police court today. Yes, a real live honest-to-goodness snake charmer. In this case it was a man, George W. Usher, and he was there because the police had seen fit to arrest him yesterday for breaking and entering a room on Middles street and stealing a watch, some beads and 50 cents in money.

George said he haled from Providence, and his pal, Thomas J. Meaney, who gives the Hub as his home, was also present at this morning's session. Thomas was also charged with being implicated in the alleged break, but Thomas is not a snake charmer. He's the "bally-hoo" boy of the show, which is known as Cohen's Snake Charming and Vaudeville show, and which Lowell folks may see at the South Common midway on the fast approaching night before the Fourth.

George admitted that he was the right man. Yes, he had stolen the watch, beads and all, but if he hadn't been drunk it would never have happened. Thomas declared that he had no connection with the affair at all, but after hearing the testimony the court found probable cause in both cases, and ordered each held in $250 for the grand jury.

Skeels Murder Case

never will admit that death was due to arsenic.

Counsel for the defense said he would "rather rely on the first diagnosis of Dr. Charles E. Abbott, the Gay family physician, who certified that Miss Gay died of cerebral hemorrhage. We do not admit the amount of arsenic reported to have been found in the body," he continued, adding:

May Have Wrong Defendant

If Dr. Abbott saw the symptoms which he now says were of arsenical poisoning, and did not administer an antitoxin, we have the wrong defendant in the chair. If Dr. George H. Smith saw the same symptoms in the New Jersey case (the death of Albert J. Wilkins, brother of the defendant, who is also charged with his murder), consider again who should be the defendant!

As a motive, counsel said, "they bring in a bunch of junk (articles which Mrs. Skeels was charged with stealing from the Gay home) and want you to take a woman's life because Edith M. Luce (a relative of the Gays) said they were of historic value."

Government Lacked Motive

The defendant, her counsel argued, was in her right mind.

"The government lacked a motive so they sent up aliens to find one," he said.

Counsel said that there would be no request for a verdict of manslaughter. The defendant was guilty of murder in the first degree or she was innocent.

Attorney Daley referred to the government's group of aliens as "that splendid trinity" and said they had never until a few days ago realized that the death of Miss Gay might have been due to salvoan." Then he continued, "Dr. W. F. Boos rushes to the front to say he was the first man in this country to administer it. He was ready to qualify on any subject."

Acrobatic Expert

Counsel subsequently called Dr. Boos, the "acrobatic expert," in referring to the fact that he had qualified as an expert on gas asphyxiation in connection with the incident which the government said was an attempt at suicide by Mrs. Skeels when she was arrested. This episode, counsel argued, was introduced to throw dust in the eyes of the jury, and questions regarding Mrs. Skeels' eating, tampon powder, which he did in the following letter:

ADVERTISING RESULTS

A scientific authority has declared that advertising makes an appeal to seven instincts of human nature. They are: (1) property, (2) power, (3) self-preservation, (4) affections, (5) sentiment, (6) reputation, and (7) taste.

We can thus see that the art of advertising as it can be exerted in a daily paper plays to all the human instincts involving profit possibilities.

It is not extreme to say that no business can be so small as not to need or not to afford newspaper advertising. The Sun, for instance, can cover the market with the small business man and figure out a service for him in advertising whose cost will be in proportion to the volume of business he can do. It goes without saying that no business exists whose manager would assert it was above the need of advertising. Advertising is the thing that keeps a big business in first place. Advertising most assuredly gives the greatest results to those who advertise most skillfully and in the best medium, which in Lowell is

THE HIGH SCHOOL

Apparently the legislative committee on municipal finances has sized up the Lowell petition very accurately in deciding that an additional loan of $750,000 should be ample with which to complete the new high school.

The committee evidently sees the reckless extravagance that would sink $2,000,000 in an addition to a high school in a city like Lowell.

Two members of the committee, perhaps guided by practical ideas in regard to building matters, dissented from the recommendation of the committee and suggested that the plans of the new building should be presented to the next general court together with an accurate statement of the cost.

We are not in favor of delaying the project, but the gentleman who asks for the plans and an accurate estimate of the cost, shows sound judgment. To supply this information should be the first duty of the commission in appealing to the legislature for authority to borrow outside the debt limit.

The estimate of $1,500,000 is at least twice as great as it should be. If the legislature grants $750,000, that sum with $400,000 already available should be ample to complete a very respectable building. The site is paid for, most of the necessary steel is paid for and the plans are paid for, or at least certain plans which the commission seems ready to adopt are now the property of the city. If it appears that these plans call for an extravagant outlay they should be modified.

The plans should provide for a building the cost of which would come within what is reasonable for the kind of building that will meet the requirements of our city, not one that will be needlessly expensive.

If the plans are what the situation demands, then the estimated cost is altogether excessive and extravagant and should be radically reduced. The figures quoted seem to indicate that no school building can be constructed in Lowell at a fair or reasonable price. It is strange that other cities can build school houses at a much less cost than can Lowell.

It is time the high school commission got down to a business basis and arrange to give the city a building as good and as inexpensive as any found in other cities. Contractors and architects are ready to do the work at very much less than the estimate given out by the commission if they get the chance and it should not be necessary to go outside of Lowell to find them either.

The bill now before the legislature if passed in its present form will give the municipal council the power to withhold appropriations sought by the commission in case the estimated cost is considered excessive under the following provision:

"The municipal council may, before authorizing said loan, require the building commission to submit plans with the estimated cost of constructing, equipping and furnishing said high school, and in case the said estimate is in excess of the sum herein authorized to be borrowed and previously appropriated, may refuse to authorize the whole or any part of the loan authorized by this act."

This will make the council a co-partner with the commission in responsibility for the expenditure of the money and will offer a proper safeguard against extravagance as the council in the present state of our municipal finances is not likely to endorse any proposition that would waste the public funds.

BOLSHEVISM APPLIED

Every revolutionist, from the days of Absalom down, has complained of "officialdom."

The near-Bolsheviks of this

under an amendment of the constitution to be enforced conjointly by the federal and state governments—unless the whole amendment be overruled by a decision of the supreme court of the United States.

A NEW TREATY

The provision for a treaty binding the United States and England to come to the aid of France if necessary to compel Germany to comply with the treaty of Versailles is something which the French government demanded as a source of security against German treachery and German disregard of international compacts. Whether this will be received with favor in this country remains to be seen. It was assumed by most people that the League of Nations would serve this purpose without any other combination, but it seems that France was not satisfied to depend upon the league for protection. Possibly the impression prevailed that owing to the opposition of the United States, the future fate of the league was uncertain. Hence the mutual agreement between England and the United States to stand by France against any attempt on the part of Germany to break away from the treaty conditions, was insisted upon as the only sure means of protecting France in the future. The very existence of such a treaty would probably be sufficient to convince Germany that her safest course would be to follow out the provisions of the treaty to the best of her ability.

WILL RATIFY TREATY

Judging from expressions of leading officials in Germany it appears that the German government will ratify the treaty at an early day in order that the blockade may be lifted so as to permit the import of food and raw materials for manufacturing.

The terms of the treaty so hedge around the Germans with conditions that it is almost impossible for them with safety to evade any of its provisions. The people are anxious to return to normal conditions under which there will be an abundant supply of food and steady employment.

In order to meet the financial demands made under the peace treaty, the German government has decided upon a drastic system of taxation, one which will probably result in the repudiation or temporary neglect of the German war debt. In some quarters there is great sympathy for Germany; but it was to be expected that she would be compelled to make reparation so far as that is possible for the ruthless destruction spread through Belgium and France by German arms. Germany with all her burdens is better off than France, much of whose territory has been reduced to a barren waste which only years of hard labor can make productive.

ANOTHER WHITE HOPE

We learn that the north Pacific coast is to produce a "white hope" in the person of Senator Miles Pindexter of the state of Washington.

His boom was launched last week by a Tacoma newspaper publisher named S. A. Perkins. Perkins announces that republicans the entire length of the Pacific coast will join to boost Senator Pindexter's candidacy. This is an important assertion as it would furnish the first instance on record in which the entire coast could be said to be on rapport on any subject, and if true would relegate the ambitions of the lofty browed Hiram Johnson of California, also a senator, to the shelf.

Perkins intimates that republicans are to be invited to hold their convention at San Francisco and to this glorious end, Perkins avers that money is in sight whereby special trains fitted in gorgeous style would convey the republican national committee and their staffs from Chicago to Frisco gratis or at the expense of the backers of the candidate.

Perkins intimates that republicans are to be invited to hold their convention at San Francisco and to this glorious end, Perkins avers that money is in sight whereby special trains fitted in gorgeous style would convey the republican national committee and their staffs from Chicago to Frisco gratis or at the expense of the backers of the candidate.

Who knows but that this free ride to Frisco may be a sufficient inducement to drop Hiram Johnson and other less generous aspirants to the republican nomination? The man who runs on the republican ticket must be well heeled and ready to disgorge if he expects to win.

In one respect Mr. Willard and Mr. Dempsey apparently will enter the ring equally handicapped. Each has sustained a training wound over one of his eyes. It is not improbable that ringsiders may see some of the "best blood of Utah" being mixed with some of the "best blood of Kansas."

The time is fast approaching when New York cannot be said to have anything on Detroit. Detroit is now to enjoy "double decker" motor busses, such as country folk and others have enjoyed using in Fifth avenue for years.

Demobilization may be complete in August or September after which the liquor business will be legalized until national prohibition takes effect next January. Then will come

SEEN AND HEARD

How are you making it?

The fellow with the well stocked sideboard will have many friends.

Lil' ol' half per cent is coming into its own. And the raisin, oh, you raisin, how long will it be before you're raisin the klick out of the half per cent glass? Then Susie McGroarty will say,

"Them lips that touch raisins shall never smack mine."

A hundred years ago Sir Tom Noon Tafford thought—"Tis a little thin, to give a cup of water; yet its draught of cool refreshment, drained by fevered lips, may give a shock of pleasure to the frame more exquisite than when neptunean juice renews the life of joy in happiest hours."

Some fevered lips yesterday, we'll say.

By O. B. Joyful

There sure was some crowd at John Barleycorn's wake and, as at any well regulated wake repartee was known. One fellow wearing a daisy was joked a bit about it, but he made a good comeback. He said that every mourner present should have worn a daisy. The daisy, he said, is a great device to conserve moisture and to drown the litter that followed, this remark he proceeded to quote Wadsworth, as follows:

"The daisy, by the shadow that it casts, Protects the lingering dewdrop from the sun."

The July Version

He had climbed on the outside of 1 chocolate frappe, 1 nut sundae, 2 cherry sodas, 1 banana split, 2 strawberry sodas, 1 malted milk, 1 pineapple so when in rushes his little daughter, wearing her last week's silk dress, and a hat she had already had on twice (think of the poverty in that home!) The fountain fountains hung their heads in shame. Some of 'em slinked out the back door. They, too, had homes neglected, wives who had nothing but a last year's limousine to ride around in. Susie spoke! Anxiously she gazed up into the face of her father:

"Father, dear father, come home with me now."

Four of 'em signed the pledge there and then.

Calling Names

There was an argument right from the start.

He on the one side—she on the other.

They argued about it day after day—night after night, and still got no nearer a solution than at first.

It was fought out bitterly on both sides.

II

A year had gone by and still the baby was not named.

He was all for calling it something real-like Bill—Tom—Bob—Joe—Jim—Pug—Al—or Hen, after his side of the family.

She was decided on calling it something fancy-like Horatio, Charleroy—Algernon—Reginald—Quintus—or Fauntleroy, after her side of the family.

Two more years passed swiftly and still the baby was called Teets.

III

"You tell yuh what?" exclaimed a mutual friend. "The first bottle I pull out of this medicine closet, why whatever is on the label, we'll name the baby that!"

He and she looked at each other—the first time in three years.

"All right," they agreed.

"Benzoin," he read aloud.

And Benzoin it was.

IV.

After little Benzoin came girl twins—Odile and Quinny (Iodine and Quinine). Then came Roxie (Peroxide), Linny (Liniment), Rime (Glycerine) and Cassie (Casteroyle); the mutual friend officiating at the ceremony, as before, etc., etc., until all the bottles were used.—Detroit Free Press.

A RHYME OF INDIGNATION

Bill Bay State has again discovered, by painful calculation, that he is losing about $100 to give us transportation.

So he again must raise the fares, which fills him with elation. Although the public will resent this direful proclamation.

But now the shortest ride will cost a dime from any point or station. And if this scheme is a success it will surely be a success.

Long years ago in the wild West in the south of this great nation, The stage coach traffic was oft upset by a robber's depredation.

He stepped right out from behind a cactus at a dizzy elevation.

And while you grumbled and kicked in vain he plied his chosen vocation.

He pushed a gun into your face with a gutteral imprecation.

And if you failed to come across from this place you'd take a vacation.

But now the tables are reversed, he's changed his habitation.

He left the oft maraudered West for a softer occupation.

Now every day we see his gun ere we reach our destination.

For here the Bay State gunfire man now meets no molestation.

THE MAN ABOUT TOWN

I understand that there is a little dissatisfaction in connection with the awarding of Carney medals at the high school this year. One instance of this comes from a young man who headed the list of those receiving honorable mention at the exercises last Wednesday evening, but who believes that his four years' work at the high school entitles him to a medal. It may be well to explain that the right of a student to a high school diploma is based on two fundamental principles by the school authorities. In the first place, the student is credited with five so-called "points" for every full study he completes successfully and two and a half "points" for every successfully completed half study. When it comes time for a student to graduate he must have completed enough studies in his three, four or five years at the school to give him a total of "points" sufficient to correspond with the regulations specifying how many points are needed for the varying classes of diplomas. Naturally, a graduate does not need as many "points" to receive a three year diploma as for a four year diploma, and so on. The second principle upon which diplomas are awarded is the average rank obtained in all the studies which the pupil has successfully passed. Unless this average rank reaches a certain point—66 per cent, I believe—the student is not entitled to his diploma. Thus both the quantity and quality of the student's work are taken into consideration when it comes time to give him his diploma.

The same method is followed out in making the special awards, such as the Carney medals, but only in part.

Merely the quality and not the quantity of the student's work is taken into consideration. This is where the young man in question objects to the system of awarding the medals. He claims to have obtained 50 points in subjects connected with the straight college course and his average rank in these subjects was more than that obtained by one of the young men who did not receive the medal. However, the complainer also took a half study outside the straight college course—bookkeeping—and fell down in this subject to such an extent that when the rank

he received in it was averaged up with the rest of his ranks, his average in all his studies was below the average rank received by the student who actually won the medal. The school authorities had but one avenue open to them—award the medal to the student with the higher rank—and this was done.

However, he points out that he completed many more subjects than his competitor and his average in

MURDERS' WIFE, BEATS CHILDREN, KILLS SELF

WORCESTER, July 2.—After 16 years of practically constant intoxication Maurice Sheehan of 26 Eversard street, this city, murdered his wife and committed suicide early yesterday morning after he had returned from his last debauch. Sheehan first attacked his wife with a hammer, and afterward fired two shots from a revolver into her body.

For more than 10 years Sheehan had done no work, his wife supporting the family by scrubbing floors at the Worcester hospital. Though friends urged her to leave him she refused to for the sake of her children. She said she believed him too much of a coward to ever carry out the threat of killing her which he often made.

Sheehan returned to the house shortly after midnight and entered his wife's room. There he found one of his four daughters with the mother. He sent the 14-year-old girl from the room with a cuff in the face and then attacked his wife with the hammer. Meanwhile the other children, one of them a baby scarcely a year old, were cowering in the next room. After the murder of his wife he drove the other children from the house with curses and blows and turned the revolver on himself. Both were dead when neighbors were informed by the children. The oldest daughter, Mary, is in the hospital, as the result of the blows the murderer struck her.

WHY SURRENDER TO OLD AGE

WHEN YOUTHFULNESS IS NATURE'S WAY!

BY DIANA WATTS

World's Youngest Middle-Aged Woman, and International Authority on Physical Secrets of the Ancient Greeks; Author of "The Renaissance of the Greek Ideal."

Why does the woman approaching 40 surrender herself to the deadly belief that she is physically on the down-grade?

I am afraid the answer that would fit most cases is, "Laziness"; a condition of laziness induced by the genuine fatigue that is regarded as the normal condition of middle life.

Study the average woman of 35 and over, as she walks in front of you on the streets. She looks as though she had a leg at each corner. No joints at the knees, no springs in the feet; a lax, crumpled-up diaphragm, sagging muscles, and a general air of stiff, weary sloppiness.

You would say that youth had left such a body forever. You would think it impossible that a woman of 40—even a woman physically inferior and handicapped—could attain strength, grace, lightness, and a beauty more attractive than that of her girlhood.

Yet I know it is not only possible, but altogether practicable. Nor is it so terribly difficult. I know, because I have done it myself. In the process of rebuilding my own body, I discovered, worked out and verified the

LIFT YOUR CHIN AND "WALK ON AIR"

Here is a preliminary exercise for keeping the body lightsome and young:

Lift your chin quite clear from the neck, and keep your whole body from shoulder to hip quite still and erect, while walking upstairs, downstairs or on a level.

Stand on the balls of the feet until you are in perfect balance, then in walking carry your weight forward, so that it will never be out of balance, but always in a perfectly vertical line above the foot which supports it.

Remember the lifted chin, the still waist, the vertical line from hip to shoulder, the perfect balance every instant—you will find that the metaphor of "walking on air" has become a reality.

physical system of the ancient Greeks.

It is hardly too much to say that the Greek system contains the secret of perpetual youth, mental no less than physical.

I am nearly 50 years old. Recently I swam two miles, without rest and with little fatigue. I can walk all day, teach all day, write all day.

In the Yale swimming pool I did certain feats of balanced diving that were impossible for the skillful athletes of the university. In leaping, turning somersaults, jumping from moving trolley

MORE MEMBERS FOR BARBERS' UNION

Cars or busses, throwing the discs and climbing mountains, I am a fit competitor for the best trained American college girls in their early twenties.

I fully expect to be doing these things when I am 60, 70 or 75.

It is natural to do them. What is unnatural is the commonly found condition of heaviness and stiffness. There is no reason on earth why a woman of 40 should be less attractive than the woman of 30; there is every reason why she should be infinitely more so. For she can make her body as youthful as a girl's, while retaining all her added charm of experience and quiet serenity.

Body and mind are two chords in a harmony. The fatigue caused by the vacillating movements of an unbalanced, unstrung body is intimately related to mental uncertainty and indecision.

The modern person lacks a fundamental principle that may be applied to every sort of movement and occupation in life. This is precisely what the Greeks possessed. It made them the most wonderful people in every way that the human race has known.

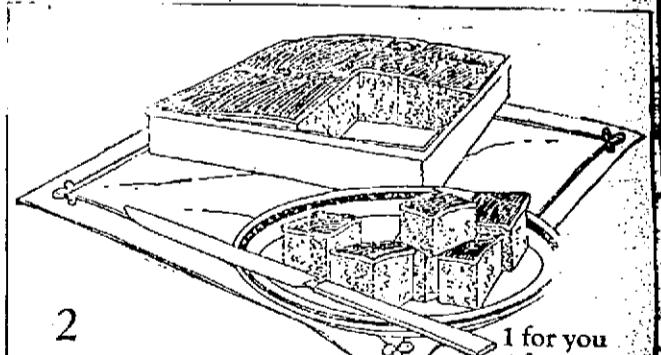

So natural is this principle that, once grasped by the mind and enforced by the will, every movement becomes an exercise. Artificial exercising is needed only at first.

It is recalled that New York state voted for prohibition in 1858, four years after Maine, pioneering, set the style. The aridity continued only for a short time, however, for the court of appeals declared the law unconstitutional.

delightful surprises

When you try this old recipe with the new blend of nut and vegetable oils—COVO—you'll be delighted to discover how fine economical COVO is for cooking. Your children may not be judges of fine oil, but they are judges of fine gingerbread. Leave the verdict to them.

A NEW OLD-FASHIONED GINGERBREAD

1/4 cup COVO	1 cup milk	1 level tablespoon
1 cup sugar	3 cups flour	ginger
2 eggs	1 rounded teaspoon	baking powder
1 cup molasses	baking soda	cinnamon
1/4 level teaspoon	pinch salt	1 cup raisins

Beat COVO till creamy. Add sugar. Then the well-beaten eggs. Beat mixture till very light. Add molasses and stir in well. Then the soda dissolved in a tablespoon of water. Sift together the flour, baking powder and salt, and add to first mixture with the milk. Lastly add the ginger and cinnamon and raisins dredged in a little of the flour. Beat till very smooth. Bake in greased pan in moderate oven about 40 minutes.

AND, of course, you will want to use COVO for salads when you remember what a delightful nut-like taste it adds to all dressings.

He leaves his wife, Mrs. Catherine Collin; three daughters, Misses Elizabeth and Catherine Collin of this city and Mrs. Richard Boylan of Brooklyn, N. Y., and five sons, Thomas, William, Joseph, Martin and Michael Collin, all of this city.

PRICE OF SPECIAL CARS ADVANCED

A meeting of the committee in charge of the annual outing of the members of the A. G. Pollard Co.'s Employees Mutual and Benefit association, which is scheduled to take place Thursday, July 10, will be held this evening for the purpose of reconsidering its action in relation to the hiring of special electric cars for the trip to Nantasket beach, where the outing is to be held.

A couple of weeks ago when the committee decided to hold the outing at Nantasket a number of electric cars sufficient to convey the excursionists to the beach were hired from the Bay State Street Railway Co. at a certain price per car, but yesterday the committee was notified that, inasmuch as the company had increased its rate, an extra charge would be made for the special electrics. It is the consensus of opinion that the contract for the cars will be cancelled and that automobile trucks will be used for the transportation of the clerks to the seashore. This matter will be decided at this evening's meeting.

TO MOVE INTO THE MOVIES—

STUDY SHAKESPEARE

PEANIE!

BY LILLIAN GISH, Famous Film Star

Do you long to "break into the movies?" to be a film star?

You think you would give the world if you could just talk to a real star and get some "pointers" on how it's done—and what the moving picture world is like from the inside?

I've been in the pictures for several years—and they do say I'm a success. I only know I have worked—and I love it—and if my experience can help any girl to gain her heart's desire and teach her the first steps of a move into the movies—I'm glad. Here's that advice so often craved!

Study Shakespeare before you enter the door of a moving picture studio!

Such advice may seem strange, because the supreme playwright of all time lived some hundreds of years before the first camera was fashioned, but hearts beat the same, then the eyes were the window of the soul, and sensitive faces spoke the mind of humankind. The camera merely records facial expression, and in the case of moving pictures, the play of emotion on the features and movement tells on a screen what Shakespeare related in a book.

Learn Shakespeare well, for oh, it does seem as if he wrote all that has ever been said since. He anticipated all of our stage, his dramatic plots are the ones that we think we discover, in a screen what Shakespeare related in a book.

So dress simply, for instance in a dark blue tailored suit, with a plain hat. Have your hair brushed well, be neat and clean. Be simple and sincere in your manner, not affected.

Don't be made up. If you do get into moving pictures you'll find that the camera will penetrate through your makeup.

After registering, if a girl isn't offered anything at once (and she won't) be the thing for her to do is to find a place to stay within her means, and then just live for opportunity. Every morning go early to the studio, take along a book, or some sewing, and try to concentrate on them to keep from being nervous over the tedious wait. You may have to live that way for many, many days, or weeks, perhaps—just waiting. Persistence may win. Indifference can't.

Dress simply and act like a lady. In spite of foolish ideas abroad about managers, they appreciate good girls, that is, managers of pictures worth while do.

So dress simply, for instance in a dark blue tailored suit, with a plain hat. Have your hair brushed well, be neat and clean. Be simple and sincere in your manner, not affected.

Don't be made up. If you do get into moving pictures you'll find that the camera will penetrate through your makeup.

To Honor Service Men

Westford street from 7:30 to 8:30 Friday morning. At 8:30 the parade line will form in Westford street and at 9 start wending its way over the principal down-town streets. In the afternoon all service men will have an opportunity to see the New England league baseball game at Spalding park free because tickets will be given them at the armory in the morning. The final feature of the day will be an exhibition of fireworks on the South common in the evening, where the service men will be given reserved positions.

Every effort will be made to have the service man, no matter what branch of the army or navy or marine corps he was associated with, feel that the day has been set apart for his special honor.

Although a complete roster is not yet available, a general idea of what proportions the morning parade will assume was evident last evening from the number of organizations that had signified their intentions of taking part.

Present plans call for four divisions: the war veterans' division, the semi-military division, civic division, and fraternal division. In all, more than 50 organizations have already been lined up to participate.

One of the features of the parade will be the advance guard of motorcycles under the direction of Lieut.

Harold E. Dyer and his staff. This will lead the entire parade and will form in Colonial avenue at 7:30 and then proceed to the state armory.

Local dealers have offered a total of 77 prizes to the best appearing features in this division.

The local lodge of Elks has voted to take part in the parade and will have an automobile division. Members who have machines will enter them.

In the parade and those who have no machines are invited to take seats in those of other members or in machines provided by the lodge. The autos will be decorated and three prizes offered for those presenting the best appearance.

CARD OF THANKS

thanks and deep appreciation to our

REVIVE ANCIENT CUSTOM

U. S. and Britain will Help by Combined Action and Not Separately

No Cases Before Superior Court for Nantucket County

NANTUCKET, July 2.—An ancient custom was revived here yesterday when the superior court for Nantucket county having no cases to try, District Attorney Joseph T. Kenney presented Chief Justice John A. Aiken pair of "pure white" gloves. In the eight months since the last sitting of the court here no criminal complaint or criminal case of any nature came before either the grand or traverse juries, the district attorney explained in making the gift.

The court, in accepting the gloves as a "testimonial to the clean record of Nantucket and her people," said the custom of the gift had been long forgotten by the courts and was dim in his recollection.

PRES. WILSON WORKS ON

MESSAGE ON WAY HOME

ON BOARD U.S.S. GEORGE WASHING-TON, Tuesday, July 1 (By the Associated Press).—The presidential voyage continues under most favorable conditions, with calm seas and mild, sunny weather. President Wilson has done some work on his message to congress, in which he will submit the treaties, protocols and general results achieved at the Paris conference, but on advice of Rear Admiral Grayson, his physician, he is giving considerable time to rest and recuperation, after the strenuous days he has just left behind and for those through which he soon must pass.

While no precise plans concerning the presentation message have been announced, it seems probable that if the George Washington arrives in New York on Monday, as expected, the treaties will be submitted and the message read by Wednesday or Thursday.

RECALL MEDIEVAL TIMES

Quaint Ceremonial Marks

Reading of King's Proclamation of Peace Signed

LONDON, July 2.—With quaint ceremonial suggestive of medieval times,

the king's proclamation that peace had been signed was read today at five points in London, St. James' palace,

Trafalgar square, Temple bar, Cheapside and the Royal Exchange.

The ceremony began at St. James'

palace, where Sir Henry Farnham

Burke, garter king of arms, accompanied by a number of state officers

garbed in tabards, read the proclamation

after six state trumpeters sounded their call. A procession then formed headed by an escort of life guards, trumpeters and numerous heralds. Officials in state robes, riding in carriages or on horseback, moved through the city to the points where different heralds read the proclamation.

A temporary barrier was erected at Temple Bar to mark the city's borders and a herald demanded admission to the city in the ancient form from the lord mayor and the corpora-

RED SOX GIVE SORRY EXHIBITION

BRAVES BAT PHILLY PITCHERS HARD

Boston made only two singles off three Philadelphia pitchers yesterday, but nine bases on balls helped them to score four runs and they were ahead until Dumont weakened in the sixth inning and the Athletics forged ahead, eventually to win by the score of 7 to 4. Boston presented a crazy-quilt lineup. Gilhooley was in right field part of the game and Hooper played both centre and right. Lamar showed up in centre for the inning and Ruth was in the left field position. Galvin played first base, Shannon second base and Caldwell, Dumont and Winn essayed to pitch.

Bob Russell bested Harry Harper in a duel of pitchers yesterday, New York winning over Washington, 1 to 0. After dropping six straight games, Cleve-land turned the corner yesterday by defeating the White Sox, 4 to 3. Chicago players made six errors. Sotheron's batting and pitching were mainly responsible for St. Louis' 5 to 4 victory over Detroit.

IMPROVEMENT IN EXCHANGE RATES

Development of Peace in Austria—Leaders Predict Outbreaks of New Wars

Says Germany Now Stands at Head of Oppressed Peoples of the World

England and America Masters of Millions—France Watch Dog of Europe

VIENNA, Sunday, June 29.—(By the Associated Press)—News regarding the prospects of peace has made no special impression upon the people of the republics formed from the former dual monarchy, because of their own myriad difficulties, but one development is the improvement of exchange rates. It is the general feeling that the central empires have suffered more through the blockade, uncertainty and internal disorders during the protracted conference at Paris than in any year of the war.

Leaders of the old regime, including Count Karolyi, formerly provisional president of Hungary; Count Czernin, formerly Austro-Hungarian foreign minister, and Count Albert Apponyi, formerly Hungarian premier, predict the outbreak of new wars, due to the failure of the peace conference to apply President Wilson's principle of the self-determination of nations.

The press continues to encourage the idea that the peace being dictated to the central empires is unjust.

The clerical Reichspost describes it as making Germany a vassal of France, adding:

"Germany now stands at the head of the oppressed peoples of the world, which brings it more honor, than when under imperial rule. Its mission will be to free Central Europe, Egypt and India."

The victory was a capitalistic one says the Neue Freie Presse. "England and America are now the absolute masters of hundreds of millions and like Emperor Hadrian, of Rome, can impose the economic death sentence on refractory nations by withholding food. The role of France is to be watch dog of Europe."

The worst days of Germany are past. She has lost the war and has been cruelly treated, but she will be again in the markets of the world quicker than her enemies think."

AMUSEMENT NOTES

THE STRAND
The management announces a midnight performance at The Strand for Thursday. This will allow patrons to enjoy the varied entertainment that the "night before" invariably offers in Lowell. Performances will be continuous on that day from 1 p. m. to midnight.

Wonderful gown creations, beautiful scenery, and dramatic efforts seldom equalled, combine in making the latest Elly Gordon offering of the screen, "Playthings of Passion." It's one of her biggest and best film features and sure to make deep impression on all patrons. Bert Lytell, the newest of the screen stars in "The Lion's Den," a story adapted from one of the recent Saturday Evening Post series, is the other big feature, and besides there is a good comedy, an excellent University of Washington song, introduced by Miss Harriet Moon, the most enjoyable. In fact it's one of the best bills of the season. The pony contest for the most popular Lowell child is progressing satisfactorily. More contestants are wanted.

LAKEVIEW PARK

It's your last chance tonight to see the famous dancers, Billie Bryant and Rita Townsend, in their artistic series of ball room dances. But—every day this week, afternoon and evening, the Flying Keelers, darling aerialists, give their great act on the outdoor platform. Don't miss it. Dancing, too.

FORD-TRIBUNE SUIT

Patterson, a Defendant, Calls Paper's Praise of Bernstorff a Mistake

MILWAUKEE, July 2.—After eight weeks of the Ford-Chicago Tribune libel suit the first principal in the case to take the stand formally appeared in the person of Capt. Joseph Miller Patterson, who, with his cousin, Col. R. R. McCormick, is a defendant. He occupied the stand all the session, with the exception of a few minutes. The testimony dealt with the Tribune's attitude toward Mexico and toward Germany and the allies before the United States entered the world war. Brief direct examination was by Atty. Weymouth Kirkland of Tribune, counsel, and cross-examination by Attorney William Lucking, for Henry Ford.

Mr. Lucking devoted much time to the reading of several editorials from the Tribune in an endeavor to show that the newspaper was pro-German. In effect, Captain Patterson stated that the Tribune and President Wilson had always differed on the Mexican problem and still differ. In 1911, at the climax of the Madero revolution, he testified, his paper believed the Mexicans could solve their own problems. By 1914, however, this opinion underwent a change by reason of the continued disorder and disorganization south of the Rio Grande, and the editors became convinced that only armed intervention, such as that employed in Cuba, could bring order out of chaos. The editors believed such action would be to the interest of the United States and Mexico alike.

"And you thought that it would please Germany to have the United States occupied with Mexico?" asked Attorney Lucking.
"Yes, I think so."

The witness would not confess pro-Germanism, although often pressed by his inquisitor.

"Well, you were not pro-ally," insisted Mr. Lucking.
"Well, it might be said that we were not pro-British," replied Captain Patterson, slowly.

Editorials, in which submarine operations were characterized as points of international law over which the American people were not prepared to go to war, were read.

One editorial, based on rumors that Ambassador von Bernstorff might be recalled from Washington, expressed the opinion that von Bernstorff had been a great power in preventing a rupture between the two countries. Mr. Lucking characterized it as pro-German, but the witness said: "It was a mistake."

Mr. Lucking read President Wilson's appeal to the press on March 25, 1916, urging the press not to refer to Gen. Pershing's pursuit of Villa as a war and to avoid hurting Mexican sensibilities.

"At this very time the Tribune was urging intervention, was it not?" asked Mr. Lucking. "Yes."

The witness said he did not see the editorial headed "Ford is an anarchist" on which the suit is based, before it went into the paper.

SIMPSON CREATES NEW FRENCH RECORD

Lieut. Bob Simpson, the sensational Missouri hurdler clipped 1-5 of a second from the French record for the 200-metre low hurdles yesterday in the allied games in the Pershing stadium when he won the final heat in the time of 24.45 seconds. Another Missourian, W. E. Sylvester was second and Merle House of Riverside, Cal., finished third. Simpson's time is only 1-5 of a second back of the world's record for the event.

BIG INCREASE IN USE OF AUTOMOBILES

(Special to The Sun)

STATE HOUSE, Boston, July 2.—That the number of automobiles used in the state is steadily increasing from month to month is indicated in figures given out by the highway commission today which show that 23,455 more cars were in operation during the six months period between January 1 and June 30 of this year, as compared with figures for the same period in 1918.

The number of pleasure cars registered up to June 30 of this year was 151,245, as against 127,760 for the same data in the compilation of last year. The 151,245 figure for the first six months of 1919 completely eclipses the figure for the entire year of 1918 when 142,600 number plates were given out, indicating that the use of cars has more than doubled in that space of time.

In respect to commercial vehicles a decided increase is also noted. In the first six months of the current year 35,821 plates were issued, as against 28,985 for the same period of last year and 33,835 for the entire span of 1918.

The cash receipts up to July 1, 1919, were practically equal to the entire receipts of the entire year of 1918, the one period bringing in $2,151,923 as compared with $2,154,408 for the other. In commenting upon these figures Commissioner James W. Syran says: "It seems to me that the registration of automobiles is simply limited to the output of the factories. Never has business equalized that of the last few months in our automobile department. June 30 was one of the busiest days of the year and every day finds the receipts beyond all expectations, based upon previous figures."

"The probability is that if anything like this rate of increase continues from 165,000 to 170,000 pleasure vehicles will be registered before the end of the present year, and at least 40,000 trucks. If the receipts from the registration of motor vehicles are left with the commission and are left for use in oiling and repairing state highways and for other road work it will not be long before the receipts will reach the $3,000,000 mark and will go far toward taking care of the highways so that it will be unnecessary to apply to the legislature each year for such substantial sums as otherwise would be necessary."

CHILDREN HAPPY AT COUNTRY CLUB

Children of members of the V. C. Country club had the time of their young lives at the club yesterday afternoon when more was done for their amusement than for the entertainment of the older folks in the annual ladies' day festivities. The weather was ideal and really has to be enjoyed to the full measure, and several hundred members, friends, and children were present.

Flying horses, a Punch and Judy show, hurdy-gurdy music and merable extravagances to delight youthful stomachs were literally rained upon the youngsters and were not still a minute.

The D. L. Page Co. served a buffet supper late in the afternoon. The United States Cartridge Co. gave a splendid concert. It was to make a mixed foursome golf one of the features of the program but it was called off because of excessive heat. Dancing was during the evening.

Mayor Ferry D. Thompson, Pollard and Hutchins Park presided over the committee on arrangements.

Kansas is geographically the state of the United States, lying so distant from the four corners of the country.

LATEST STOCK MARKET

NEW YORK, July 2.—Except rains, which manifested increased heathiness, buoyant tone marked the initial dealings on the stock exchange today, and tobacco shares and motor accessories were to the fore at gains of 1 to 3 points, which in some instances increased before the end of the first half hour. Steels, shipments, and some of the oil stocks also advanced, and Steel recorded its best position since the early part of June. Trading during the morning was on the broadest and most active scale since the reaction some three weeks ago, the turnover approaching half a million shares. Call money was at 9 per cent. Profit-taking prompted by the general advance caused reactions of 1 to 2 points among the leaders, including Steel, at midday. This was balanced by a better demand for rally oils of 2 to 6 points.

HUNGARIAN REDS DEFY THE ALLIES

Defiance Expressed in Proclamation to Red Army by Soviet Government

To Defend to Last Drop of Blood the Proletarian Dictatorship

COPENHAGEN, July 2.—Defiance to the entire powers is expressed in a proclamation to the Red army issued by the Hungarian Soviet government, according to a Budapest despatch received here. After referring to "The great sacrifice demanded by the proletarian fatherland in asking the army to evacuate part of the territory conquered in glorious battle" and proceed to territory occupied by Rumanian troops, the proclamation continues:

"We are not retiring before the mercenary troops of the Czech-Slovak imperialists. We have to do with the entire power of the greatest exploiters of the world—the French, British and American money kings, labor oppressors and peasant plunderers. We know a dictated peace is no peace and we shall not lay down our rifles because we are defending to the last drop of blood the proletarian dictatorship."

British Dirigible

ceremony than that which attended the departure of dirigibles for their monotonous North Sea patrol during the war.

Shortly before the first streaks of dawn broke over the plains, the great airship was quietly taken out of its air drome and turned around until the nose was pointed straight west.

The command "hands off" was given and the huge envelope quickly rose. Before the height of 500 feet was reached she was lost in view in the mist. The whirr of the propellers could be heard for several minutes after the airship went out of sight.

Weather reports indicate that the attempt a trans-Atlantic flight. The R-34 will meet unsalted conditions with variable winds, until she is some distance out into the Atlantic. Then it is expected she will have following winds which will assist her.

Not more than a score of people moldered the 21 miles from Edinburgh to the air drome here to witness the start, but among them was one American woman who presented a silk American flag to Lieut. Commander Zachary Lansdowne, American flight commander, just before he stepped into the gondola.

The 300 men and 160 women started at the air drome were called out at 2 a. m. by the usual "landing party" bugle, and the drowsy and faltering step of many of them evidenced the fact that the start of this historic trip had not kept them awake.

They took their accustomed place at the guy wires and bars at the lower parts of the gondolas.

The ship was towed to point about 300 yards away from the air drome and after she was turned around her five powerful motors started humming.

Then the "hands off" bugle was sounded, the airship started to rise, her propellers began to spin and almost before the cheering had ceased the great tier had disappeared in the mist.

Before the start of the trans-Atlantic flight, Lieut. Commander Zachary Lansdowne, U.S.N., on board at the invitation of the British admiralty, said:

"There is no doubt whatever in my mind, or, I believe in the minds of any of the crew, that we will get over without difficulty."

Commander Lansdowne is a firm believer in the practicability of the lighter-than-air machine and has devoted all his time during the war to studying this branch of navigation.

"It was very good of the admiralty," he continued, "to extend an invitation to our navy department that an American be included in the crew on this pioneer flight. I see no particular reason why the admiralty should have selected me, but, believe me, I am glad of the opportunity."

"As I understand it, we will not attempt any speed trial. We will cross as quickly as possible, avoiding adverse winds; but at the same time not overlooking any opportunity for observations likely to be of aid in the future to navigators and airship pilots crossing the Atlantic."

The giant British dirigible R-34 is the first lighter-than-air machine to attempt a trans-Atlantic flight. The three special wireless stations constructed at the field in connection with the flight will be tuned up to catch the first message from the dirigible.

Officers expect communication will be established when she comes within 500 miles of the coast.

It is expected the landing will not be made until after dusk in order to permit the gas bag to cool and its contents to contract, thus decreasing the lifting tendency of a dirigible lightened by a long flight. More than 1000 members of special balloon companies contributed by American army and navy authorities will be on the field to assist in making the air lines fast to its moorings.

A special fire detachment and four airships the largest of its kind in the world, measures 634 feet from nose to stern and carries three boats below the gas bag.

She has a gas capacity of 12,000,000 cubic feet, and is commanded by Major G. H. Scott of the Royal Air Force with a crew of 28 men. The craft is equipped with a wireless system as powerful as that of the Great ocean liners.

It has been estimated that the R-34 will cross the Atlantic in from 60 to 70 hours under favorable conditions. Announcement has been made, however, that no attempt will be made to establish a time record for the crossing, the comfort of the dirigible's crew being given first consideration.

With favorable weather, the R-34 is expected to parallel the route of the northern steamship lanes, but should adverse weather conditions be encountered she probably will take the southern course, passing over or near the Azores.

The landing will be made at Roosevelt Field, Mineola, L. I. Accommodations for 200,000 persons to witness the landing have been provided.

The R-34 recently made a 56-hour trial into the Baltic, during which she covered approximately 2000 miles.

Expect Blimp Friday

MINEOLA, N. Y., July 1.—Lieut. Col. Frederick W. Lucas, of the Royal Air Force, one of the advance party here arranging for the reception of the British dirigible now en route to Long Island from Scotland, said early today that he was inclined to believe the ship would not arrive before late Friday. The R-34 will be moored at Roosevelt Field while waiting to put back quickly for England.

Three special wireless stations constructed at the field in connection with the flight will be tuned up to catch the first message from the dirigible. Officers expect communication will be established when she comes within 500 miles of the coast.

It is expected the landing will not be made until after dusk in order to permit the gas bag to cool and its contents to contract, thus decreasing the lifting tendency of a dirigible lightened by a long flight. More than 1000 members of special balloon companies contributed by American army and navy authorities will be on the field to assist in making the air lines fast to its moorings.

A special fire detachment and four airships will also be stationed on the field.

The grounds will be policed by more than 1000 provost guards. Special grandstands have been provided for guests, who will include army and navy officers. The general public will be permitted to watch the landing outside the line of guards.

Aviation officers said it was possible New Yorkers might be able to observe the R-34's landing if they armed themselves with glasses and climbed to the top of their sky-scrapers—providing the airship did not arrive in fog. If the craft is forced to cruise around until dark, she may circle over the city.

TEMPORARY QUARTERS FOR SCHOOL PUPILS

The desks, chairs and other pieces of furniture at the Cheever Street school have been removed to the basement of St. Joseph's college pending the time that new quarters are arranged for the accommodation of the 200 or more pupils, who attended the school, which for the past several years has been maintained by St. Joseph's parish as a parochial school.

The school building, which was formerly the property of the city, was sold a few years ago to Eli Delisle and at that time Mr. Delisle rented the property to the parish to be used as a parochial school. A couple of weeks ago Mr. Delisle sold the property to Sebastian Barretta, who has already made plans for the erection of a large garage on the site. It was learned this morning that pending the time that a new school building can be erected, the basement of the college in Merrimack street will be turned into two class rooms for small boys and that the house located in James street next to the sisters' home, and owned by the parish, will be converted into two classrooms for the little girls. The four new classes, it is expected, will be ready for occupancy in September.

PROHIBITION IS EASILY ENFORCED

The members of the local liquor squad are experiencing very little difficulty in enforcing the prohibition regulations, according to Mayor Perry D. Thompson. They have received splendid co-operation from former liquor dealers who still have a stock on hand, and up to the present time there has been little illegal selling. His Honor has not yet increased the personnel of the squad.

It is expected the landing will not be made until after dusk in order to permit the gas bag to cool and its contents to contract, thus decreasing the lifting tendency of a dirigible lightened by a long flight. More than 1000 members of special balloon companies contributed by American army and navy authorities will be on the field to assist in making the air lines fast to its moorings.
